COUNSEL DEMAND NEW TRIAL ON SEVEN POINTS; CHIEF HOPE TO SAVE THROUGH JUROR'S NOTES TUCKER'S LIFE

Main Reliance of Lawyers Is Placed on Action of Juror Nason, Which, They Contend in Argument To-day, Vitiated the Trial at Which Tucker Was Convicted of the Murder of Mabel Page—Big Crowd at Hearing.

On notes taken by Juror W. W. Nason during the trial and by him carried into the jury room, counsel for Charles Louis Tucker are to-day making their fight for a new trial for the young man convicted of the murder of Mabel Page.

In an affidavit presented by Attorney James H. Vahey for Tucker, Juror Nason admits taking shorthand notes almost daily, carrying them to the jury room and referring to them at the end of each day's trial.

Nason Affidavit That Juryman Took Notes at Tucker Trial

Middlesex, ss. Superior Court.

COMMONWEALTH VS. CHARLES L. TUCKER.

Affidavit of W. W. Nason.

I, W. W. Nason, of Billerica, in the County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on oath depose and say that I was one of the jurors in the above entitled case; that I was in daily attendance at the Superior Court during the progress of said trial; that I took daily notes of the testimony of a great many of the witnesses who testified in said trial; that I took notes as a memorandum of the testimony in aid of memory; that I took such notes as would serve as an outline of the case in its progress, and on one occasion, in the early part of the trial I referred to my notes by way of throwing light upon some questions which two of the jurors were discussing; that I took notes substantially every day of the trial when testimony was introduced, although I never took full notes; that I generally read my notes at the end of each day's testimony until toward the last; that said notes were on my bed in the juryroom when the jury retired for final deliberations.

W. W. NASON.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Middlesex, ss. March 24, 1905.

Then personally appeared the above named W. W. Nason and made oath that the foregoing affidavit is true, before me.

JAMES H. VAHEY, Justice of the Peace.

Attorneys for the defence claim that this action is illegal, and have cited instances in other cases to substantiate their point. It has been agreed between counsel for the defence and Attorney-General Parker that these notes were taken in the court room, the juror resting his paper on the railing, and that he sat where he could be seen by counsel.

Counsel for the defence also argue that the verdict rendered by the jury was against the weight of evidence. They claim that a complete alibi was established for the defendant.

The great legal battle began in the East Cambridge court house at 10 o'clock. Besides James H. Vahey, the defendant was represented by Thomas F. Vahey and Charles H. Innes. Attorney-General Parker was assisted by District Attorney Sanderson.

In his argument Attorney Vahey presented objections to the manner in which Judge Sheldon had defined to the jury malice aforethought, and also to the manner in which the justice had defined the degree of murder, basing his objections on Judge Sheldon using the Page murder as the one to illustrate his definitions.

Tucker Brought Into Court.

Tucker himself was brought into court. The young prisoner was paler even than when he last appeared in the courtroom, but his health appeared to be good. He was neatly dressed in black coat and waistcoat and dark gray trousers. He flushed when a gaping crowd stood about the prisoner's pen and saw Deputy Sheriff Eveleth have trouble with the handcuffs.

Tucker's father and mother and his brother were in court. They occupied seats in the jury box. The only member of the jury which had convicted Tucker in attendance was Rev. W. W. Nason of Billerica, on whose shorthand notes the argument for a new trial is being largely made.

Judges Sherman and Sheldon, who presided during the trial, heard the arguments.

Within three minutes after the doors of the courtroom had been thrown open the seats were filled. There were about fifteen women who managed to find seats well toward the front, where they could see the prisoner. They were well dressed, most of them young. Tucker's walk from

3 FIRES IN TWO HOURS IN ONE HOUSE

Three fires of incendiary nature in two adjoining rooms, all inside of two hours, at No. 6 Medford court, South End, are being investigated by the East Dedham street police and Assistant Fire Marshal Dunn. Arrests may be made before night.

At 9 o'clock in the front square attic fire was discovered by Ella Coles, a lodger, and Mrs. Solomon Rodman, whose husband owns the building. Both sides of a mattress were ablaze. The occupant of the room had left the house half an hour before.

A still alarm was sent in and the fire totally extinguished.

At 10 o'clock fire was discovered by the same women in the same attic room. This time the wood mantel and clothing in the top bureau drawer were ablaze. This fire was also extinguished, a still alarm calling the apparatus.

At 11 o'clock the same two women discovered a blazing mattress in the room next to the front attic, where the other fires were. The same keys fit both doors. This fire was also extinguished. The total damage is about $100.

The building is three stories high and of brick. It is owned by Solomon Rodman, a wealthy pedler. His wife and Miss Coles say they saw a strange man running through the corridors, but their descriptions of the stranger do not tally.

NEWSBOY ILL WITH APPENDICITIS

Edward Donnelly, a newsboy, of No. 60 Moulton street, Charlestown, was carried to the Relief Hospital early to-day by his comrades, suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis. He is on the dangerous list.

CUSTOMS TOILS ENMESH TAILOR

James A. Fosbre, cutter for a large firm of Montreal tailors, was to-day arrested by Deputy United States Marshal Waters, charged with smuggling clothing into this country from Canada. He is under indictment by the Federal grand jury of Vermont and is wanted in that State.

The offence, according to the indictment, was committed at Richford, Vt., July 20 of last year. Since that time the customs officials have been on the lookout for him, and he hadn't been in Boston twenty-four hours before he was arrested at the American House.

The method, it is alleged, Fosbre employed to evade the duty, was simple but effective. The firm for which he was cutter, Gibbs & Co., made clothing for individuals in the States and delivered it to porters on trains to the States from Montreal. The baggage of the porters was never suspected until the custom officers were tipped off that something was wrong. The arrest of two porters followed last Summer.

It is stated that several thousand dollars in duties were avoided before the scheme was discovered.

STREETS OF ALBANY FLOODED BY HUDSON

ALBANY, March 27.—The unseasonable warmth of the past two days, with recent rains, have sent the Hudson over its banks here for the first time this year. The streets bordering the river are flooded in places a foot deep.

At Schenectady the Mohawk River is thirteen feet above the low water mark. It is feared that the bridge will give way, as it is the oldest structure which spans the Mohawk and has been damaged yearly by floods.

TERRORIST BOMBS AT WARSAW START POLISH REVOLUTION

WARSAW, March 27.—Baron von Nolken, Warsaw's Chief of Police, was seriously wounded by a bomb that was thrown at his carriage while he was driving rapidly past the Governor-General's palace on his way to investigate a previous bomb explosion that had wounded six policemen in the police station at Praga, a suburb of this city.

Both bomb explosions are believed to be part of an elaborate conspiracy, the object of which was to destroy Baron von Nolken, who is detested by the Polish masses.

There is tremendous excitement in the city, and the officials fear that a general uprising of the Poles is imminent, as the bomb explosions came as the culmination of a revolutionary movement of considerable proportions that has been observed in the region around Siedlce, Bielsk, Vlodslavsk, Rodin and Lukov, south and southeast of Warsaw.

The country has been flooded with proclamations of foreign and local origin, calling for a rising in Poland and with revolutionary songs and addresses, the latter demanding the use of the Polish language in all the schools, administrative offices and courts.

SIX POLICEMEN WOUNDED.

The first step in the plot against Von Nolken was taken shortly before eight o'clock, when a richly dressed Jew threw a bomb into the police station at Praga, a

CHASING WOMAN FOR THE STOREY COTTON MILLION

SOPHIE BECK SAID TO HAVE ALL THE FUNDS

Called Brains of Concern in Which New England People Lost Thousands.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Detectives here are seeking Sophie Beck, who disappeared from Philadelphia, the police say, with $1,000,000 in cash and securities of the get-rich-quick Storey Cotton Company. She was seen in Manhattan on Sunday morning with a man, well-known in the Tenderloin as "Judge" Frank Stone, and now known to be Frank C. Marrin.

The couple stopped at an uptown restaurant in a motor car. The machine was covered with dust, as if from a long trip over country. It is believed the machine carried the million which Sophie Beck is supposed to have taken from the Quaker City. At least two persons who knew both Marrin and the woman recognized them, but before the police could be notified they had breakfasted and had left at a rapid pace in a northerly direction.

May Be in Boston.

Detectives believe they may have gone to some suburban station to take a train either for Boston or for some Canadian port where they could catch a steamer for Europe.

Before leaving Philadelphia, Sophie Beck, who is now believed to have been the brains of the Storey Cotton Company, planned all the details of her flight. She made arrangements for gathering negotiable bonds and converting real estate into cash, planned her method of eluding the Secret Service men, and finally outlined for her confederates a complete campaign against prosecution.

Francis to Be Released.

As a result of the woman's clever financiering, Stanley Francis will to-day be released on bail, despite the fact that to accomplish this his friends must put up a $50,000 bond for his appearance when wanted.

William Flynn, captain of the local bureau of Secret Service, professed ignorance of the movements of the couple who are being so earnestly sought, but he admitted that it might be possible that they had been in this city.

Sophie Beck was born in Charlestown, Ill.; went to Chicago; left there in February, 1900, in company with Frank C. Marrin; went to San Francisco, thence to New Orleans, where she lived for some time. Two years ago she arrived in Philadelphia. She had at odd times been known as Estelle Collins.

When she became stenographer in the Storey Cotton Company, acting as Marrin's personal representative, it is said she took the name of Estelle Collins. Her salary was $500 a week.

BELIEVED TO HAVE FLED WITH $1,000,000.

Sophia Beck, who is supposed to have escaped with the funds of the Storey Cotton Company, is described as the brains of the concern in which Boston and New England people have lost thousands of dollars.

GLOUCESTER RICH MAN OFF, LEAVING WIFE

Mystery in the Departure of Andrew Dodd, and Mrs. Dodd Is Indignant.

PUZZLED BY HIS CONDUCT

Why did the rich Andrew W. Dodd forsake his handsome home and beautiful young wife and disappear?

Did he sail for Europe with his son, as reported?

These are the questions which are being asked to-day in Gloucester, where Mr. Dodd is a rich glue manufacturer, and in Salem, where he has occupied a magnificent home, No. 360 Essex street.

The young wife can't answer either of the questions; the young wife's mother is positive in the belief that Mr. Dodd has not gone to Europe as announced, but that is in the vicinity of Salem awaiting developments. Further the mother says that the cause of the trouble between Mr. Dodd, who is fifty-five years old, and his wife, who is only twenty-two, is talk by servants, who made life unbearable for Mrs. Dodd.

When seen at her home to-day the mother, Mrs. Annie E. Clapp, said:

Says Dodd Is Nearby.

"Mr. Dodd has not gone to Europe. He is in the near vicinity awaiting developments. He went away without leaving anything to eat in the house, not even so much as a pinch of salt. He did leave a money order for Mrs. Dodd. She is to receive $40 a week and the use of the handsome house, which is under lease to Mr. Dodd for four years to come. Out of this $40 a week she is to pay all bills."

Mrs. Clapp further declares that two servants in the Dodd house, who had been there for eight years, made her daughter's life unbearable almost. It is stated that a suit may be brought by one of these servants as a result of happenings in the house during the last week.

Mr. Dodd's counsel, John M. Raymond of Salem, has taken no action yet in the matter and he has nothing to say. Meanwhile the cause of the mysterious departure of Mr. Dodd and his whereabouts are still mysteries to Salem and Gloucester.

"What hurt me the most," said Mrs. Dodd, "is that in the very breath in which my husband was proclaiming his love he was lying to me. Now it causes me to feel that I have not met with so much of a loss after all. But I shall take measures to see that I am vindicated. To think of the position he has placed me in! All Salem, Gloucester, the whole North Shore, and thousands in Boston, where my husband is so well known, are talking. They have heard the gossip; they might as well learn the truth."

Mrs. Dodd was Miss Alma Clapp when she was employed as a stenographer in Mr. Dodd's Boston office. She was twenty years old and he was fifty-three. One of his sons is a Princeton student, the other attends the Worcester Military Academy. Mr. Dodd fell in love with his handsome office assistant. She is a brunette, petite and winsome. Although her employer was thirty years her senior the young woman consented to marry him and there was a sensation in Salem society circles when Mr. Dodd took his young wife home. That was two years ago.

All Harmony at First.

Mrs. Dodd's mother and sisters visited her and for a time all was apparent harmony. Of late there has been gossip in Salem that it had fled from the Dodd home.

The young wife declares that her husband talked of marital infelicity while in a barber shop, and that he even discussed her with their servants. But even the local gossips were agnast when they ready in last Saturday's issue of a Salem newspaper an advertisement which read:

> From and after this date I forbid all persons trusting anyone on my account, as I shall pay no bills contracted except on written order from me.
> March 24. A. W. DODD.

In the same newspaper on the same day was announced the departure for Europe of Mr. Dodd and his son.

"Have Been True to Him."

"I cannot say why Mr. Dodd has left me," said Mrs. Dodd, when she told the story of the parting. "I have always been a loving wife. I have been a companion to him always. I have shared his burdens and looked out for his interests. I have tried by every act in my power to be true to him. Now I shall see that justice is done me. I shall take legal measures to see that my name is vindicated, and that the public is made to understand that the fault is not mine.

"He has repaid my love and kindness by making confidants of the barbers and other people of the town. By plotting with my servants in the kitchen, and taking their part against their mistress. By the meanest duplicity; by making a dupe of me, and then leaving me without a cent to face scorn and contumely.

"When I came here two years ago as Andrew W. Dodd's wife people looked askance. You know there was a big difference in our ages. But the difference in social standing was all in my favor.

Belongs to Old Family.

"For my family is one of the oldest in the State, and I am a Daughter of the American Revolution, and eligible to join, if I cared, the Society of Colonial Dames. Mr. Dodd, on the contrary, did not move in Salem society, and he seemed to have few callers, as far as I was able to see.

"But still things ran smoothly, and we got along beautifully together, for I was very fond of Mr. Dodd, and I think he was of me.

"Then servant girls, some of whom I have since discharged, began to mix in our affairs. I learned this from gossip by neighbors.

"A friend told me that my husband was going to leave me and I went to my mother for advice. She told me to go home and tell Mr. Dodd what I had heard. I told my husband it was said he was going to leave me because he was not happy and thought I had not made things pleasant for his children. I told him that I had heard that he had made statements like this at the barber shop downtown. His answer was: "It makes me sick to hear these stories going around about any trouble between us, Alma, if there were anything to it I would tell you."

"I told him that if he couldn't get along with me, or if I was doing anything to make his life unhappy, let us separate peacefully and not have any public scandal about it. He declared that he had no thought of a separation, and that he loved me as much as he ever did, saying, 'Alma, I love you dearly and always have.'

Calls Conduct "Outrageous."

"He told me he wished me to go Philadelphia to visit a friend and my younger sister was to accompany me. Mr. Dodd went to Boston with us and got the tickets. He kissed me good-by and while I was in Philadelphia I got several affectionate telegrams from him. When I got home I found him gone. The papers said he had sailed for Europe and I am going to find large suburb on the other side of the Vistula River.

POLICE CHIEF AND 6 OTHERS ARE WOUNDED

The men had just been assembled before going on duty. Six policemen were wounded and all the furniture, as well as one wall, was destroyed. The bomb thrower, in trying to escape, met a policeman and shot twice, wounding the officer in the stomach. The prisoner himself was wounded and is in the hospital.

A telephone message was immediately sent to Baron von Nolken at the city hall, informing him of the outrage. The baron, accompanied by a police official, started immediately for Praga in a carriage.

When the carriage was rapidly passing the Governor-General's palace a man standing on the pavement threw a bomb at the vehicle.

GOT FULL FORCE OF BOMB.

Baron Von Nolken, who was sitting on the side nearest the assailant, received the full charge of the bomb, while his companion escaped unhurt. The coachman was thrown from the box and the carriage was smashed.

Baron Von Nolken was removed to the City Hall and doctors were summoned. They found he had received serious injuries on the head, neck, arm and leg. He is in a critical condition to-day.

Meanwhile the police official accompanying Baron Von Nolken saw the bomb thrower fleeing, and pursued and caught up with him, but the criminal proved the stronger and tore himself away.

POLICEMAN SHOT DEAD.

Another policeman fired twice after him without result, while a third policeman, in plain clothes, who joined in the pursuit, was shot dead on Sowia street by the fleeing assailant.

A girl who was passing the spot when the bomb was thown was wounded by splinters, and had to be taken to the hospital.

According to the theory of the police, the revolutionists calculated upon Baron von Nolken going to Praga on learning of the explosion of the bomb at the station there, and knew he must pass the palace, that being the only road by which he could reach the only bridge across the Vistula.

The affair caused great excitement. A popular rumor says the revolutionaries adopted this course of informing the police that they have more bombs besides those discovered in the Powonsk Cemetery on Saturday.

Baron von Nolken is very unpopular. He is hated by the masses of the Polish population, who hold him responsible for the sanguinary suppression of the disturbances here at the end of January. He has been here only a year, having come from St. Petersburg, where he was chief of the mounted division of the police.

RUSSIANS THINK JAPS WILL SEIZE SAKHALIN SOON

ST. PETERSBURG, March 27.—According to Government advices, brought to the mainland from Sakhalin, and telegraphed from Kharbarovsk, the Japanese are expected to land at Korsakovsk early in April, the port being then free from ice.

The Russians are not in a position to resist, the whole military force on the island being less than 2,000 soldiers and prison guards.

There are 6,000 convicts in the penal camps, the remainder of the population consisting of 3,000 natives and 6,000 time-expired convicts, with women and children who have settled on the island.

The prospect that the convicts may be landed on the mainland in the vicinity of Vladivostok by the Japanese is being considered.

JAP ARMIES ARE ONE HUNDRED MILES NORTH OF MUKDEN

TOKIO, March 27.—The Japanese forces, according to official dispatches, have passed the palisades and are advancing with a wide front on both sides of the railway. The van is already 100 miles north of Mukden. The Russians have been driven out of all districts watered by the Liao River.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 27.—It is reported from the front that Marshal Oyama has informed the Chinese governor of Kirin that the Japanese would enter the city April 10.

The Tanovoe Vremya says that the Japanese flanking column is now eighty miles east of Kayuan on the Kirin road, but says further progress will be contested by the Russians. On the other hand, the Russ says a part of Kawamura's army is marching from Korea toward Kirin, unopposed.

According to private reports, Linevitch's army is continuing the retreat, the men suffering great privations. These reports are denied by the general staff.

It is declared on good authority that mobilization plans are in abeyance. Generals Dragomiroff and Grodekoff believe General Linevitch in no immediate danger, but the gravest concern is felt for Vladivostok.

KING EDWARD MAY URGE PEACE WHILE IN COPENHAGEN

LONDON, March 27.—According to arrangements which are subject to change, King Edward will leave London on April 6. He will join Queen Alexandra at Cologne, and thence their majesties will go to Copenhagen for the celebration of the birthday of King Christian, April 8. Dispatches from Copenhagen say that while it is not known that King Edward's visit has any connection with Russo-Japanese peace propositions, King Christian strongly favors peace, and should the Dowager Empress of Russia also come to her father's birthday celebration, it will be regarded as a signal of a peace conference.

It is reported that M. d'Iswolsky, the Russian minister to Denmark, left St. Petersburg Saturday for Copenhagen.

FIGHT IS ON TO-DAY TO SAVE TUCKER FROM DEATH CHAIR

the jail to the courtroom was witnessed by a curious crowd.

Prisoner Deeply Interested.

Tucker paid close attention to the arguments. He crossed his hands in his lap in that attitude which characterized his demeanor at the trial. His hair had been allowed to grow, and this gave his head a massive appearance.

One of the first points dwelt upon by Lawyer Vahey was that the prosecution failed to establish any adequate motive for the crime. He pointed out that Attorney-General Parker, in his brilliant summing up, declared that a motive for the crime was not necessary.

Mr. Sanderson attempted to establish by his examination of the Commonwealth's witnesses that the motive was robbery. Mr. Vahey claimed that he was absolutely unable to do this because all the money that Tucker possessed, so far as was established by evidence, was thoroughly accounted for outside of the Page house.

Another point urged by Mr. Vahey is that the prosecution absolutely failed to place Tucker, by any direct evidence, any closer to the scene of the murder than Cutter's Corner, which is about 250 yards distant from the house in which Mabel Page was murdered.

Lays Stress on Alibi.

The evidence for the defence, it was claimed, established conclusively that it would have been impossible for Tucker, between the time he was seen on Weston bridge at 12 o'clock and the time he reached his home at Auburndale, shortly before 1 o'clock, to have made the trip to the Page house and have had time to accomplish the murder.

The most vital witness for the defence was Patrick Connolly, who testified that he saw Tucker, after he had passed Cutter's Corner, on his way back to his home in Auburndale, about 12:20 o'clock.

It would be impossible, if this testimony should be accepted, for the accused young man to have had time to have gone to the Page house and accomplished the murder, Mr. Vahey will argue. Attorney-General Parker, in his summing up, said that he believed Connolly was telling the truth to the best of his ability, but that he must have been mistaken in the time.

The defence called a dozen or more witnesses to prove an alibi for Tucker, and his lawyers declare that this alibi should have established his innocence. A great deal of Mr. Vahey's argument to-day will be based upon the alibi.

Parker Opposes Motion.

Attorney-General Parker, in arguing that the verdict was not against the weight of evidence, will point out that the knife sheath was found in a wagon in which Tucker had ridden less than two hours after the crime was committed; that a scarfpin, identified as belonging to Mabel Page, was found in Tucker's coat pocket; that with it were three pieces of knife blade, blood-stained, which, when whole, Dr. Wood and other medical experts testified could have made all the wounds that were found on the body of the dead woman.

The knife sheath, the broken knife blade, the blood-stained clothing, the Canadian pin, and the note found in the Page house after the crime was discovered, which handwriting experts swore was written by Charles L. Tucker, Attorney-General Parker will claim were a sufficient combination of circumstances to justify the jury in finding the prisoner guilty.

Points Presented by Tucker Counsel in Motion for New Trial

FIRST—That the verdict was against the evidence.

SECOND—That the verdict was against the weight of evidence.

THIRD—That the verdict was against the law.

FOURTH—That the verdict was against the law and the evidence.

FIFTH—That the Court erred in its instructions to the jury.

SIXTH—That the jury was not justified on the evidence in bringing in a verdict of murder in the first degree.

SEVENTH—That one of the jurymen during the trial took notes, which he used in the jury room in violation of law.

—Grounds upon which Lawyer Vahey's argument was based in motion heard to-day at East Cambridge Court.

SUBMIT 7 POINTS FOR A NEW TRIAL

When Judges Sherman and Sheldon appeared on the bench at 10:05 o'clock, James H. Vahey began the reading of his motion at once. This motion asked for a new trial for Tucker on the following grounds:

First—That the verdict was against the evidence.

Second—That the verdict was against the weight of evidence.

Third—That the verdict was against the law.

Fourth—That the verdict was against the law and the evidence.

Fifth—That the Court erred in its instructions to the jury.

Sixth—That the jury was not justified on the evidence in bringing in a verdict of murder in the first degree.

Seventh—That one of the jurymen during the trial took notes, which he used in the jury room in violation of law.

After reading his motion Lawyer Vahey began to read an affidavit made by the Rev. W. W. Nason with reference to his taking notes at the trial. He was interrupted by Attorney-General Parker.

"I object to this affidavit," said the Attorney-General, "if it discloses what took place in the jury room."

"It does not disclose what took place in the juryroom," replied Mr. Vahey.

Mr. Vahey then proceeded to read the affidavit in which Juryman Nason declared:

"I took daily notes of the testimony of many of the witnesses. I took these notes to aid my memory. I referred to the notes in the jury room usually at the close of the trial each day. Once I referred to them when I discussed the trial with another juryman.

"The notes were on my desk in the juryroom when we retired to make up our verdict."

Knew Nothing of Notes.

Mr. Vahey then read affidavits for himself, Charles H. Innes, Thomas F. Vahey and Tucker that they were unaware during the trial that the notes of Mr. Nason were being used.

Attorney-General Parker called attention to the fact that these affidavits should have been filed with the motion for a new trial.

"I do not object to their being given," said he, "but I call attention to the fact that they should have been filed with the motion for a new trial.

Mr. Vahey said that the affidavits were in order at any time.

Judge Sheldon asked the attorney for the defence whether there had been any material change made in the amended motion for a new trial. Mr. Vahey answered that in the second motion there had been no reference made to the use of the notes in the jury room.

Judge Sheldon said that no decision would be rendered at this time on the affidavits. He preferred to let the arguments go on.

Attorney-General Parker contended that Mr. Nason's affidavit was incompetent. The court stated that they would pass upon that point also after hearing the balance of the argument.

Mr. Vahey then continued. He had in front of him eleven large volumes, from which he quoted decisions of the various courts of the country on the question of jurymen taking notes. In general the decisions held that jurymen should record the facts of the case upon the "tablets of their memory."

Mr. Vahey told the court that out of all the cases where jurors had taken notes while in the courtroom, he could only find one which had occurred in Massachusetts. This was the case of Randolph against O'Riordan, vols. 155 and 331, but no decision had been rendered.

The only difference in this case was that the counsel for the defendant made affidavit to the fact that he had seen the juror taking notes in the courtroom.

This was the last case that Mr. Vahey could cite. Just as he began his argument, Attorney-General Parker interrupted. He said:

"I understood that I was to make my argument upon the law on this question of whether Juror Nason's taking notes in the cortroom is legal before Mr. Vahey begins his argument, and I would prefer to offer my legal side of the case first."

The judges consented to a recess being taken at 10:40 to permit the counsel to arrange this matter.

Agree on Certain Points.

At the opening of court after the recess, Attorney-General Parker arose and informed the judges that counsel for the defence and himself had agreed upon the following points:

That the juror in question took notes, using sheets of paper six by four inches and using a lead pencil, resting the paper against the railing and writing the testimony in short hand.

ROCKEFELLER MONEY THE PRICE OF BLOOD, MINISTER PROTESTS.

NOT DESIRABLE FOR TREASURY OF THE CHURCH

Rev. Charles S. Macfarland Scores Oil King at Meeting of the Clergy.

PROFFERED GIFT OPPOSED

"We cannot serve God and mammon," declared Rev. Charles S. Macfarland at the meeting to-day of the Congregational clergymen in Pilgrim Hall, referring to the proffered gift of $100,000 from John D. Rockefeller, the Oil King. "The money is the price of blood, and is not desirable for the treasury of an ancient Jewish or a modern Christian church."

This sentiment from Mr. Macfarland was heartily applauded by the clergymen present, as was his declaration:

"The gift has cost us the confidence of every intelligent working man in the country. There is no use in our preaching the Golden Rule if we acknowledge the rule of Gold."

Ministers all over the country took occasion in their sermons yesterday to express opinions in this controversy which threatens to become historic in the church. By many the Oil King was scored mercilessly and it was declared impolitic, if nothing else, for the American Board of Missions to accept the gift.

In New York it was stated by the Rev. C. C. Creegan that the offer of the gift of Mr. Rockefeller had been brought about through the influence of a sister-in-law, probably Miss Lucy Spellman. Meanwhile in Lakewood Mr. Rockefeller has nothing to say of the matter. He is enjoying a vacation there.

At the meeting of the Congregational clergymen to-day it was announced that Rockefeller's gift would be the subject for discussion at next Monday's meeting. Rev. James L. Barton, D. D., secretary of the American Board of Missions, will open the discussion. To-morrow the prudential committee will take definite action on the acceptance of the gift.

REV. HERBERT S. JOHNSON.

He declares Rockefeller's influence is worse than that of keeper of den of vice.

Oil King's Influence Thousand Times Worse Than Rumseller's

"I do not place Mr. Rockefeller's influence in the same class as that of a saloonkeeper or the proprietor of a den of vice. I consider .. a thousand times worse. To take his money on the general plea that religious societies can not examine into the sources of their revenue is a flimsy excuse, that under the circumstances of this special case will not justify the religious organizations that offer it."
—From sermon by the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, Warren Avenue Baptist Church

JESUS ASKED GIFTS OF BAD PEOPLE—REV. G. W. BROOKS

At the Village Congregational Church, in Dorchester, the Rev. G. Wolcott Brooks, in discussing Mr. Rockefeller's offering to the American Board, said:

"Mr. Rockefeller possesses vast wealth and should be encouraged to use it for benevolent purposes. Personally, I believe him to be a good man, that is, a Christian. The wholesale charges made against the Standard Oil Company have never been fully substantiated. And even if Mr. Rockefeller were a bad man, his offering should be gladly and graciously received.

"Jesus not only received, but solicited gifts from bad people.

"In the book of Luke we have the beautiful story of a 'woman which was a sinner,' who, in a Pharisee's house, broke her elaborate box of precious ointment, and also broke her heart, and bathed His feet with her tears.

"And think of Zacchaeus. By his own confession he was a bad man, financially dishonest. But there was lingering goodness in his heart, and Jesus always tried to strengthen what remained of purity, and so he said to him: 'Zacchaeus, come down, for to-day I must abide at thy house.' We must not take sides with those, who, seeing Jesus walking lovingly home with Zacchaeus, exclaimed with horror: 'He has gone to be a guest with a man that is a sinner.'

"As a matter of fact, there is no clean money.

"For any one to earn a perfectly clean coin, he would need to be as spotless as an angel.

"If all dirty money were taken out of every contribution there would be nothing but the box left.

"In the sight of heaven we and our earnings are all unclean.

"Even if it could be established that the Standard Oil Company is thoroughly iniquitous, then the great railroads which have connived with that corporation and grown rich on its business, should share in the public condemnation. The greatest and most respectable railroad corporations have evidently given subsidies in favor of the Standard Oil Company. But our missionary and benevolent societies and colleges hold large blocks of these railroad securities, which, according to the present outcry, are all tainted, and so, according to the logic of the protestants, should be thrown out of the window."

"Up to His Elbows in Blood; Let Him Make Restitution"

If half of what is said be true, this man's path in life is wet with orphans' tears. Every step in the ladder of his success has been marked by broken hearts and ruined homes. He came to his place of power, not as the eagle soars, but as the serpent crawls.

In the name of God he defaces God's image in man, and under the banner of the love of Christ he stands up to his elbows in blood. Therefore let him make restitution.—From sermon by Rev. Peter MacQueen, First Parish Church, Charlestown.

SISTER-IN-LAW BROUGHT ABOUT ROCKEFELLER GIFT

NEW YORK, March 27.—That a woman, a sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, caused him to make the $100,000 gift to the American Board of Missions, which has caused such a furore of discussion among the ministers, is the assertion to-day of the Rev. C. C. Creegan, secretary of the recipient organization.

Mr. Creegan, at the close of a series of dedication services at the Broadway Tabernacle, intimated that the gift had come to the board through the efforts of a woman. He added to-day that the woman was a sister-in-law of Mr. Rockefeller, and that this sister-in-law was a member of the Broadway Tabernacle. As Miss Lucy Spellman, who resides in the Rockefeller home, is the only woman member of the church who bears such a relation to the Oil King, it is generally believed that she is the one to whom the secretary of the board referred.

BOARD WILL BE COMPROMISED IF IT ACCEPTS GIFT

The Rev. John G. Taylor of Arlington Heights summarized the charges against the Standard Oil Company as alike destructive in trade and iniquitous in morals to show why the gift of John D. Rockefeller should not be accepted. He said:

"The American Board has not always been responsible to the finest moral sentiment in our churches. Its relation is so distinctly financial that as a creator of great ideals, as an awakener of the deepest passion for moral regeneration, as an inspirer of the holiest enthusiasm for world conquest in Jesus's name it has frequently fallen short.

"It is believed by the public that Mr. Rockefeller is the Standard Oil Company in no small measure, and that he is the personal embodiment of its methods. The man cannot be disassociated from the business out of which he has grown fabulously rich. Now the American Board ought not to be compromised by accepting a gift from any man so hopelessly tangled in an iniquitous business method.

"Money is not tainted apart from the hand that holds it or made it, but some gifts can no more be separated from the giver than can his shadow in the sunshine. Rockefeller's money cannot be accepted without honoring the man, without recognizing the obligation that goes with the gift."

IF MONEY CHANGERS ARE CAST OUT, THERE IS HOPE FOR TOILERS

Rev. William H. Butler of the First Methodist Church, East Weymouth, in speaking on the Congregational revolt against Rockefeller, said:

"It is a welcome sign of an ethical revival ahead of the church, generally, when a number of prominent Congregational clergymen offer public remonstrance to the acceptance of a gift of money which, in their judgement, it would hardly be honorable for their denomination to receive.

"Mr. Rockefeller stands in the public eye for business methods that no longer have the sanction of the enlightened Christian conscience, which methods the American people are likewise coming swiftly to see are opposed to the common good.

"To say that money is not tainted is an evasion of the opportunist who fights shy of principle. In a higher sense it may be regarded as tainted if circumstances warrant the assumption. That a remonstrance has been made against accepting a gift on the ground that to accept the money would be equivalent to a betrayal of the fundamental ethical principles of the Christian church—this is the significant, hopeful, inspiring fact.

PETER MACQUEEN MA.

"IRREVOCABLY ON SIDE OF PROTEST," REV. HARRIS G. HALE

Rev Harris G. Hale, of the Leyden Congregational Church, Brookline, took occasion Sunday to express from the pulpit his opinion of the Rockefeller offer to the American Board. He said:

"M. Rockefeller stands to-day under arraignment by the American people. He stands for a system which is among the most pernicious influences in our American life. He is teaching the young men of the nation the doctrine of success at any cost by methods of competition which shoot to kill. This is the grossest materialism.

"Standing on this ground alone, without going any farther, which I could justly do, into his methods, I ask the question: Can the church accept his gifts and attack his system and methods, which is its high duty to do? Can it honor the man without seeming to approve? In the nature of the case all money given cannot be investigated. This is a case of unusual transparency. My conscience is arrayed irrevocably on the side of the protest. I believe that the church has a rare opportunity to array itself on the side of disinterested righteousness."

Bible Way for Rockefeller to Sell Oil as Minister Sees It

"It would be the Bible way for Rockefeller to sell oil to the American people for one cent a gallon, with a bonus of $75 to every householder for every gallon bought, and to keep up this process till his wealth was sunken to honest proportions."—From sermon by Rev. William Brewster Oleson, Warren, Mass.

TECH MERGER PLAN ROUSES OPPOSITION

Members of Faculty and Student Body Strongly Object to Proposal.

Statements made by Technology students and members of the faculty indicate that there will be much trouble before the merger with Harvard is accomplished. Many Tech men say that it will never take place. The prevailing sentiment appears to have been voiced by Dean Burton when he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day:

"Massachusetts Technology professors not only do not want to see the merger with Harvard consummated, but nearly to a man they do not expect to see the proposed merger made."

The average Tech student does not express admiration for Harvard, and many are outspoken in their criticism of Harvard methods. To a man they profess the greatest love and admiration for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and seem to feel that an incorporation of their alma mater with the great university would be humbling the former institution. Outsiders say that if this feeling is dominant among Tech men, Harvard will have to take all the initiative if the merger is to be brought about.

"Tech Has Much to Lose."

"There is too much to lose in the way of individuality," said Dean Burton, "and so far as I can see nothing really great to gain. Personally, I am as much opposed to the merger as I always have been, and I know this is the sentiment of the entire Tech faculty. The merger question, however, is for the Tech corporation to decide, and we must abide by their action. But I do not expect to see it brought about and I consider the latest stories of the merger at least premature, if not wholly unwarranted."

Professors and students alike are discussing the latest news of the probable merger. Groups of students in front of Rogers Hall at Tech to-day talked of the merger and men representing all four classes agreed that they did not want Tech to join hands with Harvard.

Student Feeling Opposed.

A prominent member of the senior class at Tech, who has been identified during his entire course with all the student interest in his alma mater, told a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day that he would wager that a thorough canvass of all Tech students on the question of merging with Harvard would evince the fact that less than fifty students out of the 1,700 students enrolled would even listen to an argument for combining the colors of Tech with the Crimson.

W. P. A. ORDER STIRS LOCAL RAILROAD MEN

Arbitrary Mandate of Western Association as to G. A. R. and Other Excursions.

Local officials of Western roads intimate that trouble may grow out of the action of the Western Passenger Association in arbitrarily distributing the G. A. R. excursion business as well as the Epworth League traffic and the transportation of the Eagles.

These organizations hold annual conventions at Denver, Col., the coming Summer, and the Western Passenger Association has issued strict orders to traffic agents that the association, not the agents, will pass upon the question as to how the excursionists will be booked.

This order, if it is obeyed, will materially affect New England bookings, and will change the plans of the railroads as well as those of the several organizations whose members, with their friends, propose to make the trip.

The local agent of one of the big western lines which will be adversely affected by the mandate from the Western Passenger Association said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"Such an order is in effect a direct violation of the Inter-state Commerce Law. Followed to its logical conclusion it would mean that all the local agencies should be abandoned and one big agency established. We can do nothing, however, except to submit as gracefully as possible.

"The Western Passenger Association gets its order from a coterie of powerful railroad magnates, and if the present ruling works out successfully all the big passenger associations will be dictated to.

"Thus far only the western lines are effected by the order. Neither the Eastern, Central or New England Associations have taken action.

MOTHER LET SONS GO AND WED STUDENT

Mrs. Barnard's Oldest Boys Were College Chums of Man She Married.

Torn by the conflicting feelings of the love of a mother for her sons, and the love of a beautiful woman of forty-two for a handsome young Westerner of twenty-two who adored her, Mrs. F. B. Barnard held to her sweetheart, James Packard, married him, and let her sons go.

Mrs. Packard is a fascinating brunette, fond of all outdoor exercises, with rosy cheeks and ripe red lips, with sparkling eyes and a girlish laugh belying her years. She is prominent in Boston society, dresses in perfect taste, and when her oldest son, Fred, brought home from Tech his college chum, big "Jimmie" Packard, of Denver, Col., the young man was greatly impressed by the beauty and grace of his hostess.

Called With Sons.

The mother approved of her son's choice of a friend, and it became a matter of course for the two young men to come home together Saturdays from a grind at "Tech" to spend Sunday at the fine country home of the Barnards at Waverly. Mrs. Barnard was a widow when Packard first saw her, and her widow's weeds were most becoming.

It was in October that Mr. Barnard died, and Packard first visited the Barnard home in January, when the first pangs of grief at the loss of a husband and father had given way to melancholy resignation. The big Westener cheered up the house. The widow liked him. The children worshipped him. The two oldest boys thought him their ideal Westener.

One day Packard took his trunk to the Barnard home, and then there was trouble right away. The two boys found they did not like their western hero as much as they thought, and wanted to know what right he had to take such a step without an invitation. They also objected to his driving with their mother most daily, but their anger changed to consternation when Packard flourished a wedding certificate and told the indignant boys he was their stepfather, for he had married their mother in Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. Packard are enjoying their honeymoon at Groton.

Mother Controls Income.

The two oldest boys have engaged rooms at No. 551 Columbus avenue and by so doing have renounced the income from their father's estate, for he died so suddenly he left no will or personal provisions for them so their mother acquired the management of the entire fortune, which amounts to several hundred thousand dollars.

Fred B. Barnard, the oldest son, said:

"We decided it was best to live apart. Will we get any income from my mother? That I cannot say. Things are a trifle unsettled yet. Of course we opposed such a match. Packard is all right enough. Good chap. Well connected in Denver, and I liked him first rate until this unexpected outcome. Had he been older we shouldn't have cared, but he was altogether too young. That's about the only objection."

SOMERVILLE DEATH FROM SPOTTED FEVER

LUKE W. RYAN, 39, QUICKLY SUCCUMBS, AND YOUNG GIRL IS STRICKEN.

Cerebro-spinal meningitis, the dreaded "spotted fever," is spreading in Greater Boston. Two new cases were reported from Somerville to-day, one swiftly fatal, the other not yet arrived at the acute stage.

Medical experts who have studied the disease and who have watched the spread of the present epidemic have noted the fact that it worked its way from Manchester and northern New Hampshire down through the thickly populated manufacturing district of the Merrimack valley and thence on to Boston.

Luke W. Ryan, 39 years of age, of No. 95 Flint street, Somerville, was stricken at his home early yesterday, and died before arrangements could be made for his removal to a hospital. He was ill about six hours. He leaves a wife and three children. He was a widely known resident of Somerville and a member of several fraternal societies.

The second case reported to Dr. Dearborn, of the Health Department, was that of Ella Sennott, fourteen years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Sennott, of No. 73 Warwick street, Somerville.

Removed to Hospital.

When the attending physician diagnosed the case as one of spotted fever, a report was immediately made to the Health Department, and the young girl was removed to the Somerville Hospital.

To-day it was reported that her condition was serious, but had not progressed to the acute stage.

Lowell is thoroughly aroused to the danger which threatens it from an epidemic of cerebro-spinal meningitis. Already there have been ten deaths from the dread disease, and twenty more cases are scattered about the city. The latest death was that of Christo Agathis, a seventeen-year-old boy, who succumbed after an illness of a few hours' duration.

Lowell is stricken with fear over the rapid spread of the malady. Scores of those suffering from la grippe or other minor ills have called a physician in the belief that they had caught the terrible "spotted fever." Serious as the situation is, the terrors of the people have magnified it.

The disease is not confined to any one section of the city, though the Greek colony has suffered the most. There are now four cases here, while sixteen others are scattered over the rest of the city.

Board of Health Active.

The Lowell Board of Health appreciates the gravity of the situation, and is doing everything in its power to arrest the course of the epidemic. An investigation into the cause and remedy begins to-day, from which good results are hoped. Every effort in their power will be made to protect the public health.

The physicians have in every instance used the anti-toxin treatment, but it is proposed to try the method of trephining, used successfully by Dr. William Todd Helmuth at the Flower Hospital, New York. Dr. Helmuth made an incision in the patient's skull, relieving the pressure of the fluid on the brain, and bringing instant relief, though the patient was in convulsions which denote the last stages of the disease.

Citizens Alarmed.

"The citizens of Lowell fear this ailment worse than they have any epidemic that has prevailed there," says Dr. E. J. Welch. "I have been called to many cases where many people imagined they were stricken with cerebro-spinal meningitis, and while in some instances I found they really had the disease, in most cases the sufferers were afflicted with the grip or some other minor ill."

There have been two cases of "spotted fever" in Watertown within the past week, one of them fatal and the other likely to prove so. In both instances the victims have been children of tender years. The two-year-old child of Charles Cheney, on Arsenal street, died early last week from the malady, and a daughter of Lewis Gouthro, of Morse street, also two years old, is in a serious condition. The anti-toxin treatment has been used in both cases.

Cambridge Investigates.

The health officials of Cambridge have instituted a rigid investigation into the death of Miss Hattie Alexander, the eighteen-year-old girl, who died of cerebro-spinal meningitis at 203 River street Friday afternoon, to determine if possible where the disease was contracted, and to take proper measures to prevent its spread. This is the first case to be reported to the Board of Health since the present epidemic in New England has made its appearance.

The first case of cerebro-spinal meningitis has been reported to the Newton Board of Health, the victim being Frank Parker, a young man of twenty, living on Cemetery avenue, Newton Centre. He was taken sick last week and at once removed to the City Hospital, where he died in a few hours. The Board of Health through its agent, Harry A. Stone, will investigate the case.

20,000 VISIT SCENE OF THE BROCKTON HORROR

Sunday Crowds From Neighboring Towns—Memorial Services—Body of Waitress Identified.

BROCKTON, March 27.—Yesterday, the first Sunday after the factory horror, the scene of the disaster was visited by crowds from neighboring towns. Twenty thousand strangers, at least, came to town to see the ruins.

Memorial services for the dead were held in several places. The Odd Fellows' organizations, which lost several members, held a service in Canton Hall. Memorial addresses were given by the Rev. George Boice Titus of the First Baptist Church and the Rev. William H. Morrison of the First Universalist Church.

At the church of the Sacred Heart a service was held for the unknown dead and was largely attended, the Rev. J. M. O. Genest and the Rev. Victor Choquette conducted the service.

In all the churches the catastrophe was referred to by the preachers in their sermons, and the necessity for relief was urged upon the congregations. A vesper service was held in the Church of the New Jerusalem. A double quartet sang and an address was made by the pastor, the Rev. Louis G. Hoeck.

The investigating committee of the relief committee expects to have all the cases well in hand within a few days, and has already provided for the wants of the sufferers who are in immediate need of assistance.

The committee cautions anyone against giving money for relief unless the solicitor bears proper credentials.

The eighteenth body to be identified was that of Mrs. Dora Clark.

Mrs. Clark was engaged as waitress in the factory lunch room, and had been employed there about twenty minutes when the explosion occurred and she perished. Identification was made by means of a comb.

Mayor Keith and members of the relief committee were at Melrose Cemetery and selected a lot for interment of the unidentified dead, to the west of the G. A. R. memorial lot. A large fifty-foot oval in the centre, surrounded by paths, will be reserved for burial of the victims and in the centre will be erected the tall shaft that is to commemorate their death.

Mayor Keith said the selection of the lot will be submitted to the relief committee next Friday night for its aceptance.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS 96

Sympathy for the Brockton sufferers and a demand for better boiler inspection service by the State was the gist of a resolution passed at the Building Trades Council meeting.

The annual election of officers was held, President Jeremiah J. Donovan, of the Roofers' Union, being returned to that office for a third term. Other officers chosen were: Vice-president, Frank P. McGrath, of the Artificial and Cement Workers; recording secretary, Edward A. McDonald, of the woodworkers; reading clerk, John Owens, soapstone workers; financial secretary, James Beatty, steamfitters; treasurer, George E. Flynn, steamfitters; sergeant-at-arms, Thomas F. Keough, lathers; trustees, William H. Watts, painters (eighteen months), and O. P. Conquest, woodworkers (one year); auditing committee, H. J. Sweeney, paperhangers; Domenico D'Allesandro, Italian laborers; William J. Fitzgerald, sheet metal workers. John Trest Cashman was re-elected business agent for the seventh time.

A committee was appointed to wait on the Rapid Transit Commission regarding the refusal of the contractors for the new subway to employ citizens, as provided by law, instead of non-citizens.

The secretary was instructed to write to the Central Labor Union, American Federation of Labor and Knights of Labor, protesting against the granting of a charter to the building laborers for the formation of a centre hangers' union. A communication was sent the Brockton Central Labor Union and Building Trades organization protesting against a non-union firm doing the lathing on the new Douglas addition to the Brockton Hospital.

Two new organizations were admitted to the Council, Marble Cutters' Helpers' Union No. 54 and Marble Cutters and Setters' Union No. 50.

DONATE TO BROCKTON FUND.

A preliminary donation of $25 was made the Brockton sufferers by Boston Typographical Union No. 13 at its meeting in Brodbine Hall. The union also passed a resolution thanking Harry K. Skeffington of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and Alfred J. Davis of the Garment Workers' Union for their assistance in securing an order through the Revere town meeting for the use of the union label on all town printing. Business Agent Daniel J. McDonald of the Allied Printing Trades Council made a report which was received with favor.

It was decided to raise no objection to the joint publication of addresses made in the joint debate at Faneuil Hall between President Eliot of Harvard and Frank K. Foster without the union label, it being understood, however, that a notice stating why the label did not appear should be contained in the publication.

The eight-hour committee will inaugurate a vigorous campaign in support of the demand for the eight-hour workday for book and job printers to go into effect January 1, 1906. The question of Local No. 13 becoming affiliated with the various Central Labor Unions was favorably considered, but action was deferred until the next meeting for final action.

The union took steps for raising $750 as its contribution towards the erection of the Cummings Memorial addition to the Union Printers' Home in Colorado Springs. The secretary was requested to invite a physician from the Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tubersulosis to address the union.

The position taken by the Central Labor Union on trade schools was indorsed. Fifteen new members were admitted.

IN STRICT CONFIDENCE.

Women Obtain Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Help.

She Has Guided Thousands to Health.—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Fred Seydel.

It is a great satisfaction for a woman to feel that she can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only, a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and above all, a woman who has had more experience in treating female ills than any living person.

Over one hundred thousand cases of female diseases come before Mrs. Pinkham every year, some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day.

Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence of women, and every testimonial letter published is done so with the written consent or request of the writer, in order that other sick women may be benefited as they have been.

Mrs. Fred Seydel, of 413 North 54th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Over a year ago I wrote you a letter asking advice, as I had female ills and could not carry a child to maturity. I received your kind letter of instructions and followed your advice. I am not only a well woman in consequence, but have a beautiful baby girl. I wish every suffering woman in the land would write you for advice, as you have done so much for me."

Just as surely as Mrs. Seydel was cured, will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman suffering from any form of female ills.

No other medicine in all the world has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Therefore no prudent woman will accept any substitute which a druggist may offer.

If you are sick, write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and always helpful.

CLOSE TO NATURE.

WHY SUNSHINE BRINGS HEALTH.

EVERYONE knows that the pure country air and a chance to get close to Nature in the fields and woods, is sure to improve our animal spirits and bodily health. We are only civilized animals after all, and the present dwellers in the cities are compelled to live in badly ventilated rooms or factories filled with the germs of disease—of grip, consumption or catarrh. They are compelled to eat their lunch hastily, and, in fact, to run the human machine at all times so improperly that they are constantly in danger of being sick. Sunshine and good air are essential for good health. Nature provides the germ destroyer, if we only find it, in a life in the open air and sunshine.* If we are run down physically, if our blood has too many of the white blood corpuscles and not enough of the red corpuscles; if we look pale and anaemic, or with pimples or hives appearing on the skin, it's a pretty sure warning that we need a little of nature's cure. For those who are confined indoors and need a strengthening tonic, a blood and body builder, there is a remedy provided by Nature which is sure and safe—an Alterative Extract from roots and herbs, without the use of alcohol, which nourishes the tissues and nerves with good red blood. That medicine was the discovery of Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. It was sold by druggists thirty-seven years ago or more and has become more popular every year since, under the name of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Dr. Pierce receives quantities of grateful letters and testimonials every day. It would take all of this newspaper's space to print those received in a single month. Here is a sample:

"About seven years ago my health failed, and I tried different doctors but they could not help me," writes Reuben S. Kleppinger, Esq., of Lehighton, Pa. (Box 673). "I was still getting worse. Had a cough, pain in chest, night-sweats, was weak and nervous. I decided to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and state my case. I received a prompt and careful reply, which I still have in my possession. The malady was a complicated one, involving the nasal and other air-passages. There was a catarrhal condition extending from head to the bronchia and lungs. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy was advised. I used about two dozen bottles of each, also some of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and these remedies have done their work. Since that time I don't believe I have lost a day's work on account of sickness. Am well and have been able to eat anything ever since. Thanks seem but a slight return for all the good your medicine has done me."

"About two years ago I consulted a physician to try and get relief from a cold which had stopped up my head, and also settled on my lungs, causing catarrh in a very bad form, and also throat difficulties," writes Justice Thomas E. Bourquin, 1808 Ogercher Road, Savannah, Ga. "He gave me some medicine, but one month's faithful use of same failed to do me any good, so I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and bought a bottle. After using it a few days, my lungs began to heal, I did not cough nearly as much nights, slept much better, and in two weeks the cold, cough, catarrh and throat difficulty were all cured. I was certainly pleased with the results, and so wish to write you of it."

* We quote from the New York Journal the following:

"In Allen street, in eight blocks of tenement houses, live ten thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven human beings.

"The features of this miserable street are:

"Darkness; Dampness; Disease; Death.

"The deaths are especially plentiful among the very young children.

"Of all the New York streets in which evil conditions destroy child life Allen street is the worst. It has a record for killing children under five years of age.

"The street is very narrow, and the Second avenue elevated railroad running through it, filling it from house to house, roofs it in, making of it a dark, gloomy tunnel.

"On the ground it is dark all day, the lamps are always lighted.

"Diseases of the eye, pneumonia, tuberculosis, the rickets and other troubles of ill-nourished children, are features of this street.

"Among the dirt, the din, the darkness, the dampness of this infernal death tunnel, children are supposed to 'play.'

"Do you wonder that they are deformed and sickly? Do you wonder that they die off before they reach the age of five.

"As well try to grow a flower in a cellar as to bring up children in that horrid street to which poverty and the city's culpable neglect condemn so many families."

We guarantee that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does not contain alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. It is an alterative extract from the roots of most valuable medicinal plants. Persons making false statements concerning its ingredients will be prosecuted.

R. V. Pierce

TENNEY'S MEN PLAN WEEK OF HARD PRACTICE

Special to the Boston American.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 27.—This week's work will be much harder than last for the Boston Nationals. The number of games to be played and the hard morning practice will keep every one on the jump.

The manager and captain have been laying plans to improve the team work, and have been studying the best methods to get the greatest amount of work out of each individual. The team is very anxious to beat the Charlestons decisively, for having been deprived of another chance at Detroit the boys want to get satisfaction out of some one.

It will be no easy task at this season of the year to beat Charleston, as the latter showed in the games against Detroit that it is capable of playing pretty fast ball. Another week of weather like the last and the team will be right on edge.

Special to the Boston American.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 27.—Charles Hemphill, who was sold by the St. Louis American League team to the St. Paul American Association team, has refused to sign the contract forwarded by the St. Paul team. There is a difference of some $300 in the figures in the contract and what he thinks he should receive.

JOHNSON MAY FIND HART A HARD MAN

BY TAD.

Marvin Hart and Jack Johnson will meet in 'Frisco to-morrow night, and the most formidable man in the heavyweight division with the exception of Jeffries will be the winner of this fight.

Hart is one of the fastest and most willing sluggers that ever lived, and can set the pace for any of them. He has met some of the best men in the world, and has been knocked out but once. That was by Wild Bill Hanrahan, and it only lasted a round. Hart had just put his dukes up when—biff on the jaw, and—home.

He claims it was a fluke, and his splendid record stands by him in his assertion. He has had thirty fights, and fifteen of these have ended in knockouts. That speaks well for his wallop. Among those who have tasted the slam are Al Weinig, Jimmy Ryan, Tommy West, Dan Creedon, Billy Stift, Dick O'Brien and Kid Carter. He bested Gus Ruhlin at Philadelphia in a six-round bout and had draws with George Gardner, John Wille and Jack O'Brien.

Pretty good record, at that.

He is stacking up against a live one in Johnson though, and if he can beat the big smoke he will be hailed as a second Jeff.

IF HART WINS JEFFRIES SAYS HE'LL MEET HIM

NEW YORK, March 27.—"If Hart defeats Johnson to-morrow night," said Jim Jeffries, who has just arrived here after a year's absence, "I will then arrange a match with the Kentuckian. As they say, you'll have to show me, I'm from the West.

"No, no Johnson for mine. I still draw the color line. If the time comes when I can't get a match with a white man, I'll quit the ring with a thud.

"By the way, there's another game that has sprung into prominence since I've been away, and which I've been called upon to try. It's that jiu-jitsu. But I want to say right here that I'm not going to mix up in it in any way.

"I won't have any jiu-jitsu in mine. There's only one sure method of self-defence, and that's a right or left swing to the jaw."

STAR DOG AT COLLIE SHOW

Not content with owning a number of the best American-bred collies and winning with them at the principal bench shows throughout the country, Samuel Untermyer of New York city will soon add to his kennels at Grey-Stone-on-the-Hudson, Yonkers, a collection of six dogs and bitches from among the most valuable stock of collies in England. They will arrive in New York on the Campania, which is due on April 1, and will be exhibited for the first time in America at the show of the Collie Club in Mechanics Building, April 4 and 5.

As an indication of the character of Mr. Untermyer's purchases abroad it is only necessary to point to the fact that about $3,000, an unusual price, for an eleven-months-old puppy dog named Southpoint Sculptor. The young dog is voted as one of the most valuable for his age in England and is the winner of many prizes.

Among the others of Mr. Untermyer's importations are four bitches and a puppy dog, all of which are expected to be strong rivals of J. Pierpont Morgan's imported collies.

SCHOOL OARS WORK TO-DAY FOR FIRST TIME

The interscholastic rowing season will open this afternoon with preliminary limbering-up work on the hydraulic machines at the B. A. A. and Union Boat Club houses.

At the Union, Donovan will again look after the schoolboys, and at the B. A. A., Herbert H. Holton will be in charge.

WRESTLER AFTER BOUT.

Worcester, March 25.—Jack McMullen, the 115-pound wrestler, is anxious to arrange matches with men of his weight. He doesn't care who the man is or where the match is to take place, just as long as he gets the bout. His manager is H. A. Mathews, 554 Main street.

After Playing Rubber Game With South Atlantic League Champs,

COLLINS' TEAM QUITS MACON TODAY

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL,

Boston American Staff Correspondent With Team.

MACON, Ga., March 27.—This is the last day for the Champs in Macon. This morning the players are due for hard practice and this afternoon the regulars will play the final game with the Macon team.

Collins says he will probably start off with Josslyn and wind up with one of the older pitchers. Of course he wants to put the game under his belt, for it would be rather annoying to get out of town after losing two out of three. With any kind of batting it will be a cinch for the Champs.

Had Plenty of Ginger.

The boys went on the diamond with plenty of ginger this morning, the day of rest making them like well fed horses which had been kept in the stalls.

Sunday was a very quiet day for all hands. Most of the boys slept late, but for everybody. Collins and some of the $10,000 "beauties" went auto riding, a delegation of $5,000 "beauties" hired carriages, a few of the $2,500 "beauties" took a trolley ride and the $1,500 "beauties" strolled about the suburbs.

Collins's party came to grief about a mile out, the chain of the auto breaking. Fortunately the street car line was handy, and they came home by that route, being greeted with the merry "Ha-ha" by the less fashionable of the ball players. This adventure led to a discussion of automobiles and the prices of them on the sidewalk of the hotel after breakfast this morning, and someone remarked that only .400 hitters could afford the machines.

This led President Taylor to observe: "I'll buy an automobile for every member of the team that hits for .400 this season."

Spring Old Gag.

Somehow or other this announcement did not create unbounded enthusiasm among the members of the team, and one of them came forward with the old Weber-Fields gag, as follows:

Fields—A bear has escaped in der hotel, in the afternoon there was a little doing and der lantlord offers ten tousand tollars reward to whoever catches der bear.

Weber—Der lantlord does? Vy, he ain't got der money.

Fields—Vell, I know, but ain't it a good offer?

The application of this joke, of course, is not that Mr. Taylor hasn't got the money, but that .400 hitters are mighty scarce.

The athletic president of the Champs had planned an extensive excursion into the country Sunday afternoon. He spent the entire morning writing important letters and then inadvertently dropped them into the letter box that stands in the hotel office. After depositing them there he discovered that they would not be collected until 7 o'clock this morning, so he gave up his excursion and devoted the afternoon to rewriting the letters and taking them to the postoffice, where they caught the night mail.

The Macon club is dickering for the release of Kid Shaffer (aged forty-five). No direct proposition has been made, but they are beating about the bush. If any kind of a reasonable offer is made the chances are Shaffer will change uniforms.

Most of the players have received their nicknames by this time. Here are some of them:

Gibson, "King;" McGovern, "Red;" Grimshaw, "Lantern Jaw;" Parent, "Spaghetti" or "Little Casino;" Stahl, "Round Head;" Burkett, "The Crab;" O'Brien, "Obie;" Shaffer, "Kid;" Unglaub, "One Lung;" Winter, "Rags;" Tannehill, "Pop Eye;" Doran, "Dugan," and so on.

TRAINING CAMP NOTES:

Grimshaw has lost the checker championship of the team to a newspaper man.

Winters shin bone is very sore from the blow he got from Ferris's bat on Sunday.

The hotel where the Champs were to have stopped in Jacksonville tried a hold-up game on President Taylor so he has switched to the Aragon.

Despite the fact that Macon grows tiresome, the players have had exceptional facilities for training. They leave to-night in almost perfect condition.

Stahl and Farrell are really the only backward ones.

Several of the players went to church Sunday morning.

The Boer War show is still in town. Some of the participants took a little more than was good for them and the ball players were treated to the spectacle of a lowly Macon cop running in Lieutenant-Generals and other high officials of the production.

The Champs will be in Savannah two days and a half, leaving there for Jacksonville on Thursday afternoon.

Treasurer Carl Green will join the team there, relieving President Taylor of the pleasure of paying the bills for the remainder of the trip.

MANY WESTERN SPORTS DUB JABEZ WHITE A "HAS BEEN"

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—When pugilists and managers of pugilists fall out the public is let into the secrets of the guild. This is a new reading of an old adage.

For days past the Britts and the Battling Nelsons have been delving to their armpits in a soiled linen wash. Charges of crookedness have been made, the most pointed accusation being that Willie Britt wanted Battling Nelson to throw a fight to Jimmy Britt.

This Mr. W. Britt indignantly denies. He says the story was trumped up by Nolan, who showed lack of managerial tact in letting the Britt-Nelson contest slip through his fingers, and who wanted to spring something sensational in order to cover his own deficiency as a matchmaker.

Unseemly Wrangle.

The wrangle is one of the most unseemly that has marked the progress of ring sport in this city. Nolan in particular has been bitterly emphatic in his denunciation of those who have thwarted the plans of himself and his Dane. Not content with stating that the Britts wanted to pre-arrange the Nelson-Britt fight, he asserts that the Gans-Britt contest was a swindle.

It is a good thing—or maybe bad thing—that the people who were behind the Ralston bill did not know of the mass of incriminating evidence Nolan had in his possession. They would surely have used him in their fight against a continuance of the fistic game.

As matters stand now, even, many are wondering whether Nolan will content himself with what he has said so far. If he can a tale unfold which will show when the Gans-Britt plot was hatched out and by whom he will relieve himself of the suspicion of being merely a disgruntled fighter's agent who is talking at random.

What Started Charges.

In order that the circumstances leading up to the malodorous squabble may be understood, it should be stated that prior to the Nelson-"Young Corbett" contest Britt and Nelson were matched to box before the Yosemite Club. After defeating Corbett, Nelson, according to Nolan, became dissatisfied with the terms mentioned in the articles. He had signed to box for fifty-five per cent. He heard that Britt was to get ten per cent. additional, and he insisted that he be treated similarly, or that new articles calling for sixty-five per cent. for the fighters be drawn up.

Matchmaker Coffroth of the Yosemite Club refused to change the conditions and the match fell through. Then Coffroth closed a deal with Jabez White of England, through Tom O'Rourke of New York.

There were mutterings from the Nelson camp when it was announced that the English boxer was being brought here, and on the day White arrived in New York the storm broke. It was then that Nolan told of being approached by Willie Britt. If White had been drowned in mid-ocean and the Nelson-Britt match had come on the boards again, Nolan might have carried the secret to the grave with him.

Think White a "Has Been."

The best that can be said for Jabez White is that he is coming to San Francisco under particularly adverse circumstances. Nearly every sporting page in the country has blazoned the news that he has been out of the ring for years and that he was little short of a fancy sparrer at the best of times. He has all this to live down. He will have to look "every inch a fighter," and he will have to show something really impressive in his training in order to ingratiate himself with the ring followers of this burg.

At the outset it is said that Charlie Mitchell purposes having White do his work behind closed doors. A move of that kind would be fatal to all prospects of a "bumper" house. To begin with, the notion is not original. Bill Rickards, of Chicago, was the latest to inaugurate the closed door system. When the crowd at Woodward's saw Sam Berger rap Rickards on the jaw they understood why Bill did not wish anyone to see him work.

It is intimated that Mitchell desires to keep White under cover, because he intends to bet heavily on him. It's a shrewd scheme, Charley, old boy, but it smacks of the time when men fought for stakes and gate money was unknown.

The Jack Johnson-Marvin Hart contest takes place at Woodward's pavilion to-morrow night. So far as can be reckoned at the present time the house will not be a heavy one.

Hart Is Popular.

The match is regarded as an unequal one. About the only thing Hart is given credit for here is pluck. Personally he has made himself popular. He has legions of well-wishers, and if by chance he should win from the negro in fair fight he will become a veritable sensation. He will be as big a man, in fact, as Jim Corbett was the day he defeated John L. Sullivan at New Orleans.

No one seems to be able to get a line on Hart from the work he does at his quarters. Truth to tell, San Franciscans are chary about sizing up an unknown man after their experience with Jack Munroe. They prefer to take the record for it, and a comparison of the past performances of Hart and Johnson put poor Marvin in the light of a rank outsider.

There is this to it, however. Hart, according to his own telling, is a twenty-pound heavier man than when he fought last. Every pound of the increase is fighting weight, judging from his appearance. He says he has improved in general knowledge of the fighting game, as well as in hitting force. He certainly is an adept at tearing punching bags from their fastenings, and the remark is frequently made that one of his wallops would be sufficient to terminate a fight.

And then comes the reflection that very few men have been able to land fairly on the black-skinned wonder, Johnson.

YALE'S COACH MAKES A VISIT TO CAMBRIDGE

Kennedy, old Eli's popular rowing coach made a flying visit to Cambridge, to examine the new Yale shells which are being constructed there. He had an interesting conference with Harry Vail, coach of the Harvard Newell Boat Club. It is said that Kennedy has Vail booked for a position with one of the first-class colleges of the East.

WILLIE CORNELL TURNS "PRO"

Willie Cornell, of Lowell, the amateur 125-pound A. A. U. champion, is going to forsake the ranks of the "pures" and become a full-fledged professional mitt wielder. It was only this month that he won his title, meeting the best talent that is in the amateur field, and swept the boards clean. A year ago he disputed the championship in the final bout of his class and was determined to come to the front this year, and succeeded admirably.

Cornell is one of the cleverest boys ever seen in the ring and will no doubt make a reputation among the "pros" as he did as an amateur. He picks out some fast material to begin, with as he wants to meet Jimmy Hanlon, Young Schindler or George Murray.

It looks as though this will be a very busy week in the realm of boxing. To-morrow night at Frisco, Jack Johnson, the colored wonder, whom Jeff refuses to meet, will hook up with that shifty fighter, Marvin Hart. Followers of the game generally pick Johnson to bring home the money.

* * *

Locally we will not be without some stirring fistic affrays. Fred Douglass of Savannah is carded to appear against Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence at the Douglas A. C. Both are clever boxers, and local fans are looking forward to one of the finest contested fights that has taken place in this vicinity this season.

* * *

The Roanoke Club will hold an amateur boxing show to-night at its rooms on North Russell street. A good list of entries has been filed, and it is expected that good, fast boxing will be the result.

* * *

Slowtown has some fast mills arranged for the week. Rufe Turner, the Western colored fistic artist, will clash with Joe Gans, the hard-hitting colored lightweight. It will be a case of both boxers having to exert all the ring strategy they possess, with the result that a mill of the "Dan Patch" order will be decided.

* * *

Honey Mellody, the local welterweight, will encounter Martin Duffy at Butte, Friday night. Many of his admirers say that Honey will finish up his rival before the limit, as he did Jack McCarthy recently.

* * *

Mike "Twin" says that Jimmy Gardner need not try to arrange a match with Britt, as he will take him on any time that the Lowell boy sees fit. Sullivan is booked to meet Charlie Sieger, at Portland, Friday.

Mattie Baldwin's manager, Billy Hamilton, wasted no time in announcing that Mattie was ready to take on Danny Gallagher at 125 pounds, and he states that he is agreeable to winner taking all and is willing to bet $100 on the side.

* * *

"Young Corbett" and Kid Sullivan will meet in Baltimore Friday. The latter is said to be a fighter of more than ordinary ability and one calculated to give "Corbett" more than he is looking for. The Denver pugilist has been "breasting" trouble in big bunches of late and if he doesn't stack up against it in the Washington youth, then fans the country wide will be disappointed, as Sullivan has been lately building up an enviable record for himself.

Notes of the Diamond.

W. E. H., Quincy—To find a team's standing, divide the number of games won by the number of games played.

* * *

There is a clause lacking in the championship rules as formulated by the magnates of the two leagues which was conspicuous in the Boston-Pittsburg series in 1903. There was a clause to the effect that no player could take part in the games who had not been a member of either team for at least thirty days prior to the closing of the season. Now there is no provision to prevent teams picking up star players at the last minute to win out the prize money.

* * *

The losing team will not cut much of a figure in the financial side of the championship series that comes after the schedule is finished, as each member is not likely to get more than $100 if the receipts for four games amount to $20,000. The magnates get there 60 per cent. anyway, while the players split up the rest, 75 and 25.

* * *

"All of the Cleveland pitchers who have been at Hot Springs tell the same story regarding old "Cy" Young.

"I watched him in practice the day before we came away," said Joss, "and I confess I never saw such speed or such control in all my life." Everyone who has seen him work this Spring believes he will make his life's record this season.

Muggsy McGraw says:

"I got a letter from a first baseman who wants to join our team. He says he is six feet and four inches tall, and that not one ball went over his head last season. I told that to 'Ted' Sullivan, and he advised me to write him and ask him how many went between his legs."

Boston American WOMAN'S Home Magazine

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Women Should Acquire a Fine Sense of Honor, of Truthfulness and Desire for Thoroughness

A WOMAN in business is very much distressed by having the statement made to her that the word of our sex was not held in high esteem in the legal world, and that from almost every standpoint woman was regarded by man as a rather irresponsible being.

Until the last quarter of a century woman was what man made her, with his laws and restrictions and traditions. Yet even with all those handicaps she has left a remarkable record upon the books of history.

In every walk of life, in every art and sphere, woman has made her shining mark. During the last twenty-five years her progress has been less impeded by the debris of old traditions, and she has sped forward upon the broadening road of progress with astonishing rapidity.

Comments and criticisms such as my correspondent repeats are scarcely worth remembering or refuting. Man compelled woman to prevaricate about herself for so many centuries that if she has still the tendency to withhold the truth or to distort it at times we need not wonder.

Man hid her away from all knowledge of the great issues of life so long and kept her in ignorance for fear she would know herself and him too well that we should not be surprised if she is still unable to grasp real conditions of life as readily as he is.

A realization of personal responsibility has only begun to dawn upon woman. She still thinks of herself, to a great extent, as the privileged being—where self-dependence is concerned—that man educated her to believe was God's intent when she was formed.

Without question, woman does not keep appointments of a business nature as promptly or regard obligations as seriously as the majority of men do. Few business women are as thorough as men in their work, and their methods are less direct, less positive. Women are usually more nervous than men, and consequently less agreeable to deal with.

It is only the exceptional woman who possesses the power of concentration, which is one of the first qualities a man develops in business. Women scatter their forces in a thousand avenues, where men conserve them. Women have not yet learned to know the value of time in business matters as men perceive its value.

Tactful and agreeable in social life, yet in business woman rarely shows those qualities to the same degree the most blundering man exhibits them in his dealings with his fellows.

She is often brusque with her own sex and indifferent with the other, mistaking both attitudes for poise in the business world. Woman still expects privileges and benefits to be granted her, because she is a woman.

But all these peculiarities will be outgrown with the passage of time and the increasing opportunities allowed her for the cultivation of her full powers. Here are a few suggestions for every woman who has started upon a business career and who wishes to prove herself as successful as her male competitors.

Let her put down in her notebook these qualities as worthy of cultivation:

A sense of responsibility to fill her position with dignity and exactness.

A realization of the value of time, her own and that of others.

Promptness in keeping engagements.

A purely business point of view regarding debts, with no idea of sex privileges or benefits.

The value of affability and the necessity for tact in business affairs.

The need of controlling the nerves and nervous actions.

A fine sense of honor, of truthfulness, and a desire for thoroughness.

Meantime here is what is reported by Mlle. Borst, a French woman philosopher, who has been experimenting with men and women in the matter of credibility of evidence. The experimenter used twenty-four persons, twelve of each sex, in her investigation.

After ending the tests, which covered several weeks, as the subjects were examined repeatedly, Mlle. Borst tabulated the results.

She noted false answers, correct answers, answers certain and uncertain, correct or wrong answers given under oath. She thus discovered the extent of the evidence given, its faithfulness, the assurance of the witness, the influence of the oath upon him or her.

These are her chief conclusions:

Entirely faithful evidence is the exception, every witness supplying from his or her imagination the omissions of memory.

About ten per cent. of the statements in a voluntary deposition are wrong.

Depositions brought about by suggestions are longer than voluntary ones—fuller, that is, of detail—but less reliable.

Evidence improves by practice.

Women are more truthful witnesses than men.

About one-twelfth of the statements in a deposition under oath are incorrect.

Mlle. Borst's investigation simply bears out, in a scientific manner, the idea that woman sees more details than man, and remembers them better.

It is an interesting discovery.

This would indicate that "the woman in business" has been misinformed regarding the legal status of woman's word the world over.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Do Women Enjoy Life As Much as Men Do?

DOROTHY DIX

STRIPPED of all the chiffons with which we have surrounded the subject, the real object of life is to achieve happiness—to have a good time.

People who have bad digestions, and who cannot enjoy themselves anyway, may deny this, and assert that the purpose of existence ought to be to forward some high moral aim.

But the fact remains that the great desire of most of us, and the great struggle, is for pleasure.

This brings up an interesting problem as to whether men or women have the better time.

To me there seems but one answer to the question—men have most of the fun of the world.

Next to being born an idiot or a criminal—with whom the law classifies her—the heaviest handicap that is ever laid on a human being is the handicap of being born a woman.

Except for bearing children there is nothing that a woman is ever called on to do that her sex doesn't make harder. This is the case even in the purely domestic pursuits. A man can cook better than a woman because he is physically better able to wrestle with the pots and pans.

He is more suited for housework because it doesn't break his back as it does a woman's to reach up with the dusting brush after cobwebs and get down on his knees and scrub for dirt, and he would make an ideal nurse because he wouldn't be hindered by petticoats.

If you watch a woman going up the steps with a baby in one arm and a lighted lamp in her hand, and trying to hold up her skirt, you will realize how many difficulties even a mother labors under in being a woman.

Women do not have as good a time as men do enjoying the ordinary, legitimate pleasures of life, and when it comes to participating in the hilarities of existence they are simply barred out. The price is too high. It may be that for their dissipations men, in the end, have to pay the piper, but women who are gay and giddy have to pay for a whole orchestra.

That women are less happy than men we unconsciously recognize in our attitude toward them. We are surprised when a woman even shows a sense of humor. We are amazed when she jokes, and we look with suspicion upon her if she is merry and is given to laughter.

Indeed, we are so accustomed to women taking a serious, if not melancholy, view of things, that a cheerful woman, and one who sees things cheerfully, is sure to be spoken of as frivolous and light-minded.

You never heard these adjectives applied to a man, no matter how big a clown he is.

Men begin having a better time than women almost in their cradles. Boys, except the few unfortunates who have little Lord Fauntleroy mothers, escape the awful torture of having their stringy locks pulled, and hauled, and twisted, and contorted into long, flowing curls, such as poor, persecuted little girl martyrs are forced to wear.

Every child's birthright is freedom and dirt, but the unhappy little girl of respectable parents never comes into her inheritance.

As they grow up the depressing conditions of sex become more and more apparent. They must sit quietly and sedately down and play dolls, instead of engaging in the sports that send the rich red blood racing through the veins, and give the health which is, after all, the source of all happiness.

Worst of all, they miss the freedom of childhood, which is the only freedom that we ever really know in life, for after we are grown we are all bond-slaves to fashion, duty, necessity and a thousand other tyrants.

Of course, it may be said that each sex knows its trials and tribulations, and that, while women envy men, men feel that they have troubles beside which a woman's worries are but pin pricks compared to a dagger thrust.

The subject is, however, an interesting one. What do the BOSTON AMERICAN readers think—which have the better time, men or women?

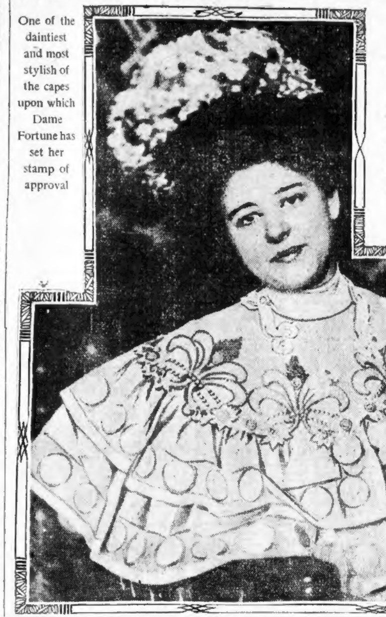
THIS CAPE FOR SPRING WEAR IS ALL THE RAGE



One of the daintiest and most stylish of the capes upon which Dame Fortune has set her stamp of approval

MAUVE poplin is the material of this light wrap, which is a type of the capes which will be much worn during the Spring days and early Summer evenings.

It is close fitting about the throat and falls in graceful fulness about the shoulders. The design is essentially Greek, as shown by the elaborate Greek border.

The ornaments about the border are hand embroidered balls, set close together. Above the border are medallions of any suitable material. The design is new from Paris and has met immediate favor.

SCARLET LIES

By X and Z, Authors of "Married to Mystery"

SYNOPSIS.

Stephen Holland becomes engaged to Mary Armstrong, the only daughter of Robert Armstrong, who has amassed a colossal fortune as a soap manufacturer. In the height of his happiness Judge Holland is mysteriously shot by an assassin, but before his death he reveals to Stephen that he is only an adopted son, and binds him, on sacred oath, to carry out his wishes as revealed in a document which is in the safe.

In his remorse Stephen takes Judith Mort, a friend of the murdered man, into his confidence. She plots to use this knowledge to her own advantage. She urges him to destroy the document. They search for it, but find it has been stolen. They decide to keep the secret together. He confines himself to the house and decides to break his engagement with Mary.

Stephen, however, enlists the services of the Mapelia police to find his father's murderer. Robert Tagg, a young detective, finds a valuable clue.

At a ball given in the Armstrong mansion Judith Mort and Morley Darch plot to separate Stephen and Mary. Mr. Holland calls on Mr. Braine. Mr. Darch sees Miss Armstrong. The plot thickens.

Some one hints to Robert Armstrong that Stephen has no right to his name. In an interview with the Soap King Stephen denies the accusation.

He at first suspects Judith Mort has betrayed him. He leaves the yacht at Mobile and speeds to Boston for an interview with Fergus Braine, who has located George Lang, whom he believes holds the key to the mystery of Stephen's birth.

"ON the contrary, very little," he answered. "I deal only with music hall artistes as a rule; circus people seem to be a race apart. But, as I was saying, Mrs. Lang, I have taken a great fancy to your son. I see a great future for him. I hope to be able to do something for him some day."

"You are very good," murmured Mrs. Lang. There was something in his tone that she did not understand, and she looked at him in slight astonishment.

"Just before you came, Mrs. Lang," Braine continued, "your son was telling me about his experiences in Africa and his accident, and of the kindness of a certain great man who is now dead—Judge Holland.

His furtive eyes were fastened on her face. He saw what he wanted. At the name of Holland a strange expression came into it. It was not a start of surprise, but rather a shadow of pain. It was as if the name brought back to her memories that were never quite asleep—as if the stranger had pronounced a name that was never quite absent from her thoughts.

She did not speak at once. Her eyes were fastened on the bent head of little Dorrit, who sat quietly at her feet, the wintry sunshine gilding her pretty fair hair. At last Mrs. Lang said quietly:

"Yes, Judge Holland was very good to George."

"Why didn't your son apply to him for help when he came back from Africa?" asked Braine. "Or, if not then, when he lost his money last year? Judge Holland was a very powerful man——"

"I know," interrupted Mrs. Lang. "But I am glad he didn't. I like to think that George is proud. Judge Holland saved his life; that is as much as one man can do for another. To ask him for money after that would have been base."

"You never met Judge Holland, Mrs. Lang?"

It was meant to be a bombshell, but the answer came at once, without even a perceptible pause.

"Oh, no, Mr. Selwyn, I never met Judge Holland, although I should have liked to thank him for saving my boy's life."

After that, somehow, the conversation languished.

"Were you ever a——" began Braine, after a moment's pause. He glanced comprehensively around, but he did not know how to finish his sentence. In the presence of this stately woman it seemed ridiculous; but she understood.

"Was I ever a circus performer?" she asked, with a strange little smile, and then shook her head. "No, Mr. Selwyn, I was a professional, but in another line of business. But now I've finished Lola's skirts, and I'm afraid I must go back and cook these good people something to eat before the show begins."

Braine took the hint and rose. Evidently there was nothing more to be learned from Mrs. Lang. She had already given him more valuable information by one look on her face than her son had imparted with all the story of his adventures. For the time being it was enough.

"Good-by, Mrs. Lang, and good luck. Good luck to you and your son!"

"Thank you, Mr. Selwyn. I wish you good luck, too."

They shook hands, and he left her, with a kindly farewell to the little girl.

Then Mrs. Lang rose slowly, with a strange, faraway look in her eyes, and, without heeding the child, she walked up the steps into the living carriage, and closed the door.

Her hands went to her throat; she loosened the collar of her shabby gown, and pulled out a miniature and gazed at it, tears filling her beautiful eyes. It was the face of a young and handsome man she gazed upon, and the painted ivory was surrounded by large pearls. Surely a strange bauble for a woman to possess who traveled with a second-rate circus!

"Holland!" she murmured, with a strange note in her voice, the echo of a grief that cannot die. "Holland! Holland!" How long since anyone has spoken the name to me! Oh, my husband, the years are long! But some day I shall meet you, though never on this earth, and you will know the truth."

CHAPTER XX.

Sorting the Threads.

BRAINE walked slowly back to the hotel, where he had left the small bag in which he had packed a few necessaries of the toilet in case he should be obliged to spend a night in Port Cleno. But this proceeding was not necessary. He had done enough for the present; indeed, had he not done everything? He had fulfilled his commission; he had found the Langs. And yet there was some instinct at the back of his mind that told him that it was not everything—that it was only the beginning.

Braine boarded the express to Boston and, as the parlor train thundered along through the gray November landscape, he gave himself up to the task of sorting all the information that he had gleaned and storing it away in one of the pigeon holes of that marvellous mind of his, which from now henceforward would be labelled "Holland Case."

He was bound to confess that, although he had done his client's bidding, he had learned nothing, as far as he personally was concerned, of Stephen Holland's reason for seeking these people out

The obvious explanation, of course, was that Stephen Holland had been charged by his father to find the man who had served him in South Africa, and whose life he had saved, and give him some material assistance, in memory of the dangers and perils that he and the late Judge Holland braved together.

Braine, however, thoroughly mistrusted the obvious. Besides, there were several other objections to the theory. One was that George Lang had distinctly stated that Judge Holland had not known him by his real name, his nickname of "Leo" having been used by all connected in the expedition.

Another, and yet a still more significant one, was that Stephen Holland had said nothing whatever about George Lang having served his father ten years ago, but had distinctly stated that neither he nor his mother had been heard of since 1882, when they had been living on Worcester street. And that was more than twenty years ago.

Now, surely, if Stephen Holland had known anything about the African episode, he would have mentioned it. Braine, therefore, was forced to the conclusion that he was ignorant of it. This meant either a strange coincidence or a thorough mystery, for never for a moment did he credit Stephen Holland's assertion that he was making these investigations in his professional capacity as a lawyer on behalf of a client.

But the most important piece of information that the great detective carried away with him was undoubtedly the fact that in the past Mrs. Lang had known Judge Holland. She had betrayed it the moment Braine had spoken his name by that strange look of quiet pain that had crossed her still beautiful face.

Braine flattered himself that there was no shadow of an expression on the human face that he could not read, and that he never made a mistake. And on Mrs. Lang's face he had read a plain tale of memories awakened by the dead judge's name.

To what phase of the past these memories referred he had no clue. Mrs. Lang had flatly denied having met the late Judge Holland; but that meant nothing. Also, to what purpose he might one day be able to put his knowledge that he had acquired was as yet shrouded in obscurity; but he had a sort of feeling that he had touched the fringe of one of the great secret dramas of human life.

On his arrival in Boston he found a thousand things to occupy his attention, and he resolutely put the "Holland case" from his mind. As far as that was concerned there was nothing for him but a masterly inactivity. Meanwhile he thought sometimes in the days that followed of Judith Mort and her strange bargain with him—that she would pay him $5,000 if he proved these people to be dead. Apart from the fact that she was also on the high seas, being one of Robert Armstrong's guests on his yacht, Braine was in no hurry to communicate with her.

In future he might be able to do business with her; he did not know. He did not see his way clear at all; he was groping in the dark for some clue to the strange actions of these highly-placed people. But one thing was certain—Stephen Holland was the first string to play on. If it was to be a question of material benefit, it was better to serve a millionaire than a beautiful young unmarried woman of limited means—for the present, at any rate.

Then, one evening, about a week after his visit to Port Cleno, Braine received a telegram. It said:

"Stop all investigations at once," and was signed "Holland."

Braine rubbed his large, white hands together and narrowed his eyes to slits.

"Now, what the dickens does this mean?" he asked himself.

But no answer was forthcoming, and so the sudden telegraphic command went to join the rest of the somewhat confused notes in the mental pigeon-hole labelled "Holland Case."

Two days later, about six o'clock in the evening, a clerk tapped at the door of Braine's private room.

"Mr. Holland wishes to see you, sir," he said.

It would be wrong to say that the great man was amazed, but he was certainly a little surprised, although he did not show it.

"Show him in here, Fenton," he said, "at once."

Now, the clerk was a confidential clerk, and knew his master's business.

"You have given Mrs. Mantleford an appointment for 6:15, sir," he said apologetically. "She is coming up from the country."

"Ask her to wait when she comes," ordered Braine. "If I keep her too long, ask her to come again to-morrow at the same time; and show Mr. Holland in here at once!"

When the clerk had gone, Braine again rubbed his large white hands together, and again he asked himself:

"Now, what the dickens does this mean?"

Do you know how to wash your face?

NOW don't get angry.

I simply mean that most people think that washing the face is a question of soap, water and a towel.

Well, it isn't.

What will make one face soft and rose pink will make another rough and brick red. Isn't that so? What will make one face as smooth as satin will make another as harsh and chapped as a rasp file. Freckles, "blackheads," and, worst of all, pimples, will disappear on one face under the same treatment that will bring them out on another. And the right way to wash your face in Summer is often exactly the wrong way to wash it in Winter.

Therefore:

Every woman has some splendid recipe for making a roseleaf skin, removing blemishes and keeping away that worst of "bugaboos," wrinkles, and all her sister readers of the AMERICAN would like to read about it.

So send in your pet recipe, and for each of the five best received before Sunday, April 2, the AMERICAN will send in return, free, a beautiful cut glass, silver topped powder box, with puff, as shown in the illustration.

Address all recipes, "Wash Your Face Editor," BOSTON AMERICAN, 80-82 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

With Whiskey

This is a true and tried recipe, also very simple to make and use. Put one ounce of powdered gum of benzoin in a pint of whiskey; to use, put in water in wash bowl until it is muddy, allowing it to dry without wiping. This is simple, easy and perfectly harmless.

MISS GERTRUDE HILTON.
Abington.

No Paste or Powders

First, do not use any kind of paste or powder, for they are injurious; go to bed early and rise early and bathe the face in hot water and then in cold water after; dry the face with bath towel; rub upward; then take one egg in a glass of milk; do not eat any fat or very much butter; take a walk every day and the complexion will be beautiful.

MRS. G. C. TUCKER.
Wakefield, R. I.

Soft and Smooth Face

Simmer all day one-fourth pound of flaxseed in three pints of rain water. Strain through cheese cloth, pressing it quite hard to remove all the liquid, which will be quite thick. Mix thoroughly two drachms of carbolic acid, four ounces glycerine, one-half pint cologne. Add this to the strained flaxseed. Bottle and use freely, rubbing the face and hands softly until they are dry.

M. E. S.
No. 74 Hawes street, Central Falls.

For Tan and Freckles

One pint of buttermilk, a tablespoonful of grated horseradish; let the horseradish soak in the buttermilk about ten hours before using. Smaller quantities may be used; buttermilk thickens easily in warm weather. Bathe the face before retiring and rub with the hands until dry; also drink freely of pure buttermilk, as it is an excellent liver tonic. If the liver is in perfect order, the complexion will be perfect.

MRS. J. H. FITZGERALD.
No. 635 East Eighth street, South Boston.

Never Fails

One pound epsom salts, one ounce rose water, five cents' worth glycerine, five cents' worth violet perfume, one quart rain water; boil salts, glycerine and rain water together for five minutes. When cold add rose water and perfume; bottle; get twenty-five cents' worth of alcohol and bay rum, equal parts; use the latter on face to cleanse it instead of water. Never touch the face with soap and water. It causes wrinkles and hardens the skin and creates blackheads. Wet the corner of the towel with bay rum and alcohol and rub the skin briskly. Anyone will be surprised to see what a difference this makes in only a few days. After using the bay rum then apply the No. 1 lotion with the fingers and smooth over the face till perfectly dry. This gives a massage treatment as often as applied, and leaves the skin with a clean, waxy whiteness, unlike powder.

MRS. E. J. ROW.
No. 33A Bow st., Somerville.

Thorough Drying Important

Put one heaping teaspoonful of Indian meal into a cupful of cold water before retiring. In the morning drink the water before breakfast and the meal also if you like. Follow this up every morning for six weeks and you will have neither pimples, boils or any facial blemishes, but a clear, smooth skin. Use no outward applications, but wash the face in cold water, using a good soap, rinse in cold water and wipe very dry. Thorough drying is important.

Nature's Complexion

Am not an advocate of scented complexion creams, powders, etc., and firmly believe that if the following instructions are adhered to the results cannot be other than a fine, rosy complexion. The first essential requirement is plenty of fresh air day and night. Upon arising in the morning take a sponge bath in tepid water, then with a Turkish towel rub the body until it glows; follow this by a few deep breathing exercises in a well-ventilated room. A good walk should be taken if possible in the morning. The bowels must be kept in perfect condition, which should be regulated entirely by the diet—good, plain, substantial food; no pies, cake or rich puddings; eat plenty of fruit; drink all the cold water you can between meals; take a glass of hot water the first thing in the morning and upon retiring; an apple is also excellent, eaten the last thing at night. Last but not least, do no worry and have at least eight hours' sleep.

MISS MYRTIS GRAHAM.
Melrose.

May Dew and Other Things

To make the complexion fair and smooth wash the face every morning during the month of May, that it is possible, in dew from the grass; bathe thoroughly and let it dry on and stay for an hour or two every morning; wash off in cool, not cold, water. At night, two or three times every week, bathe the face in a little lemon juice, diluted with rose water; allow it to dry on and remain over night. Next morning wash off with tepid water, then give the face a good splashing in clear cold water. This treatment is infallible where the health is perfectly good. Before this application at night, the face must be cleansed with some good, pure soap and warm water, then thoroughly rinsed with tepid water and dried on a soft towel. Neither this nor any other treatment will insure a good complexion where the health is not good.

MRS. HELEN TUCKER.
Glen road, Boston.

FIVE of these superb cut glass silver mounted powder boxes with puffs will be given for best recipes for washing the face.

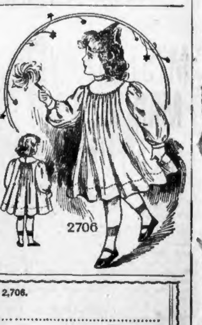
A Dainty Dress for the Little Tot



No. 2,706—Simplicity is the keynote for good taste in a child's wardrobe. Nothing is more out of place than a child "cribbed and confined" because of clothes. Childhood requires nothing more than daintiness to enhance its sweetness. This design conforms to these principles—a round yoke, or tabbed, and a skirt attached, the fulness being brought into the yoke either by tucks or shirrs. Materials used may be plain or embroidered—nainsook, lawn, madras, gingham, organdy, silk or challis. In the finer materials, an entire yoke and cuff bands of embroidery would be an addition. The materials required in the two years' size is 1¾ yards 36 inches wide.

Pattern No. 2,706 is cut in five sizes, ½, 1, 2, 4, 6 years.

NEW AMERICAN BISHOPS NAMED AT CONSISTORY

Pope Confirms Rt. Rev. Thos. F. Hickey Coadjuttor Bishop at Rochester, N. Y.

PERSECUTION IS DEPLORED

ROME, March 27.—The pope held a secret consistory to-day without creating any cardinals, merely preconizing bishops. The only American was Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Hickey, who was confirmed as coadjutor bishop of Rochester, N. Y. Mgr. Zotico Racicot was confirmed as auxiliary bishop of Montreal, Que.

All the cardinals met in the hall of the consistory of the vatican, where they received the pontiff, who entered, dressed in white, surrounded by the papal court and flanked by the noble guard and Swiss guard. When the pope was seated on the throne all the prelates advanced to pay homage to the pope, who recited the prayer of the Holy Ghost, after which only the cardinals remained.

The pontiff then delivered an allocution and immediately afterward proceeded to the preconization of Bishops. The allocution in moderate terms deplored the persecution from which the church suffered in some countries and complained of recent events in France, where beside the diplomatic rupture between the republic and the papacy the statesmen are preparing for the separation of church and State, for which, the pontiff asserted again, the Vatican was not responsible, as had been alleged. The rupture was to be deplored.

The pope also referred to the persecution of the church in some of the South American republics, especially in Nicaragua and Ecuador, citing the laws passed by the last-named republic against the church, providing for the confiscation of the property of the religious orders, interferring with the liberty of the religious associations and setting obstacles in the way of the appointment of new bishops.

To offset this the pontiff mentioned the fact that the arbitration between Chile and Peru had been intrusted to the papal representative, which had caused the holy see much satisfaction.

IMMIGRANTS REACH BOSTON BY THOUSANDS

Canopic Has 1,662, Cymric, Due To-day, Will Add 1,180 to Foreign Population.

With the arrival of the White Star liner Cymric, due to-day, all immigration records at the Boston port will be broken. The Canopic is just in with 1,662 steerage passengers, immigrants; the Cymric will bring 1,180. It is expected that there will be great trouble at the immigration office in handling this vast crowd should the Cymric arrive on time.

Early to-day it was found necessary to call out extra police to handle the crowd of 2,000 Italians, Greeks and Portuguese which had gathered to meet friends and relatives who arrived on the Canopic.

Clamor for Admittance.

This dense crowd packed Water street, Charlestown, in the vicinity of the White Star line pier and clamored for admittance. The police kept them under control while the government officials passed upon the various immigrants on the big steamer.

The unusual arrivals here are in line with the greatly increased arrivals of immigrants at New York from Russia and from the Mediterranean ports. For the first three months of this year at New York it is estimated that the immigration will exceed last year's record by something like 100,000, and Boston, too, is feeling the flood of this rush to America. Already records here are near breaking; to-day, should the Cymric arrive on time, the record for one day will be smashed.

This rush of immigration to the United States this year is despite the fact that the rate cutting between the steamship lines for steerage passengers has been stopped, and within a few months the rates have been higher than they have been for many years.

Officials Are Puzzled.

The continued rush, therefore, is a great deal of a puzzle to customs officials. The incoming tide from Russia they understand, but from the Mediterranean ports they do not.

On the Canopic, which arrived to-day, were many prominent Bostonians, among them Mr. and Mrs. Moorfield Storey, B. W. Warren of Brighton, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Estes and Dr. Frank H. Tilton. There were altogether 82 saloon, 122 second class and 1,662 steerage. On the Cymric are 45 saloon and 1,180 steerage passengers.

MYSTERY OVER MAN WHO LAY DEAD ON TRACK

Special to the Boston American.

WESTBORO, March 27.—The police are investigating the mystery surrounding the death of Frank Cunningham, whose mutilated body was found on the tracks of the Boston & Albany Railroad between here and Grafton last Friday night.

The man had no shoes or stockings on, though the feet bore no evidence of his having walked barefoot. His overalls were not torn, although his back was broken at the base of the spine.

The man was identified to-day by John Dee, the keeper of the tramp house, as a wayfarer who applied there for a night's lodging a week ago Sunday.

It is the theory of the police that the man was riding on top of a freight train and was thrown off by striking a bridge. It is presumed from the condition of the body that he fell in front of another train.

SHOT THROUGH TUNNEL ROOF, MAN WILL LIVE

WORKER IN NEW YORK SUBWAY UNDER EAST RIVER RESCUED ON SURFACE OF WATER.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Blown through the roof of the Brooklyn-New York tunnel, under the East River, by compressed air escaping from an inrush of water, an excavator in the tunnel, given up for lost, was picked up by a boat on the surface of the river to-day, sent to the Long Island College Hospital, and although frightfully injured, he will recover.

The accident is one of the most remarkable that has ever occurred in tunnel construction, and the man's amazing escape from death seems little short of miraculous. Fifteen men were working in the advanced chamber of the tunnel, from the Joralemon street end, and were almost directly beneath the centre of the river.

In some manner the compressed air pressure, which not only supplies the workmen with air but serves to support the roof of the tunnel and keep out the water, became diminished. The tunnel is fifteen feet below the river bed, but with the diminishing air pressure the water began to flow into the chamber. The men, seeing their danger, started on a run for the next chamber, but five of them were unable to reach it.

Their companions went back for them, however, and four of them were dragged to safety. The fifth could not be reached, and as the water was pouring through an enormous hole in the roof of the tunnel, he was given up for lost.

The remarkable forces pent up in the tunnel, however, operated to save him. As the inrushing water began to fill the tunnel the air pressure increased. The workman was suddenly caught in the current of escaping air, the force of which had grown tremendous.

Suddenly, as though caught in an explosion, he was shot through the hole, up through the great depth of water, and suddenly appeared on the surface of the river to the amazement and consternation of people in nearby craft.

Doctors Say He Will Live.

The disturbance in the river occasioned by the escaping air from the tunnel, and the sudden appearance of a man on the disturbed surface, amazed everyone. A boat was hurriedly put out to him, however, and he was taken to the foot of Jeralemon street, where an ambulance from the Long Island College Hospital had already been summoned to attend the other injured men. He was taken to the hospital and the physicians say he will live.

BIG REVIVAL IS STARTED IN FALL RIVER

Union Service of Protestant Congregations Is Held in Central Church.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, March 27.—A monster union revival service of all the Protestant congregations in the city was called to order at 10:30 to-day in the Central Congregational Church, looking to the "Spiritual, moral and general welfare and upliftment of the city." The financial and commercial distress resulting from the great textile strike of last year is one of the present conditions which the promoters of this revival had in mind in considering the "general welfare."

The Rev. Matthias S. Kaufman, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church and chairman of the revival committee of arrangements, says:

"We have realized for some time that the spirit of revival was strong throughout the country. We have been considering the question from a local standpoint, and have decided that this union gathering was the best solution for our needs."

SAILOR DROWNED; 3 BIRTHS ON VOYAGE

NEW YORK, March 27.—After one of the stormiest voyages in her career, the Hamburg-American liner Pretoria arrived here to-day from Hamburg, which port she left on March 12. One seaman was washed overboard and lost and there were three births in the steerage.

QUITS RACE FOR ELECTION POST

Charles R. Saunders, the Republican member of the Board of Election Commissioners, has written to Mayor Collins that he is not a candidate for reappointment. His term expires April 30.

Mr. Saunders was appointed four years ago by Mayor Hart and represented the radical wing of his party. He succeeded George P. Sanger. His relations with the other members of the board have at times been strained. Three months ago the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN exclusively announced that Mr. Sanger might be asked to take the place and this now seems to be a probability.

Charles H. Innes of Ward 10 is a candidate for the position, but is understood to be objectionable to the Democratic organization.

Dr. Greene's Nervura
ABSOLUTELY FREE.

Having a positive knowledge of the wonderful beneficial effects of my Nervura as a spring tonic, nerve strengthener and blood purifier, thus preventing meningitis, and curing colds, grippe, malaria, etc., I will present a trial bottle, absolutely free, during the present week, at the prescription counter of my medical office, 34 Temple Place, Boston.

I make this free distribution with absolute confidence that its use will prove its superior merits and fully demonstrate its remarkable unequaled and unprecedented curative powers.

By keeping the liver and kidneys active, throwing off impurities of the blood and strengthening the nerves, health is assured. Those who are already aware that Nervura is the best of all spring remedies, are invited to secure the regular large size bottle at their druggists.

In fact my remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, is really and absolutely the only professionally compounded remedy of its kind before the public today, being prepared, compounded and vouched for by myself in person. I have been in active practice at 34 Temple Place, Boston, for the last 37 years, and will stand behind this remedy in all cases. I will also consult and advise with any who see fit to call or write, regarding their ailment, without charge of any kind.

J. A. GREENE, M. D.

Specialist, Author and Medical Lecturer.

Note—The fact that Dr. Greene is proprietor of that unrivalled remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, is sufficient guarantee of the doctor's honesty and eminent medical ability. This remedy has cured more people of nervous, stomach and kidney derangements than all other proprietary medicines combined. It is the premier medicine for spring debility.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the standard unequaled family medicine and spring tonic, excelling in curative properties and life-giving action all other nerve and blood remedies.

MUSIC THAT BOSTON WILL HEAR SOON

The proceeds of the performance will be devoted to free scholarships in the Opera School.

LANGLEY TELLS WHY HE LEFT WIFE IN BOSTON

Boston Man in Denver Says He and Mrs. Langley Could Not Agree.

KNOWS MISS EVA THOMAS

Joshua B. Langley, formerly bookkeeper of the Old Colony Trust Company, society man and baseball player, who has left his wife here, has been heard from in Denver, Col. He is willing, he says, to grant a divorce and a sum of money to his wife. Mrs. Langley, according to him, wants a separation with monthly alimony.

"My wife and I could not get along together," he says, "and under the circumstances I naturally turned to other girls."

Miss Eva Thomas, whose name was mentioned in Denver dispatches in connection with Mr. Langley's departure for the West, is a Denver girl who is taking a special course at the New England Conservatory of Music.

With some emphasis, Miss Thomas declared her belief that Mrs. Langley was responsible for bringing her name into the matter of her husband's departure.

The marriage of the father the second time to a Newton woman caused an estrangement amongst the children and afforded the unusual spectacle of two brothers working side by side as clerks for the Old Colony Trust Company for years and never speaking.

WILL CLOSE STORES 10 P. M. SATURDAYS

Over 800 grocery and provision dealers have signed the agreement urged for nearly a year by The Church Association for the Advancement of the Interests of Labor, to close at 10 p. m. Saturdays, beginning April 8, during Spring and Summer.

EDGAR H. EMERSON TO GIVE REUNION BALL

"A reunion ball is to be given at Odd Fellows' Hall, No. 515 Tremont street, by Edgar H. Emerson, at 8 o'clock this evening. Invitations have been sent to many hundreds of the old and new friends of Mr. Emerson. A concert and informal reception will precede the dancing.

EAGLES TO GIVE GRAND BALL

Preparations are in progress for the fifth annual ball of the Boston Eyrie of Eagles, which will be held in Symphony Hall Easter Monday night. It is the intention of President Gartland and the committees to have the event surpass all those of previous years.

The Boston Eyrie numbers over 1,000 members in good standing. Nearly all of Governor Douglas's staff have signified their intention of being present, and it is possible that the Common Council will attend in a body.

Prominent politicians of all parties are expected, as well as State and city officials. The newly elected president, William T. Gartland, will lead the grand march.

Indigestion?

I offer all Stomach Sufferers a Full Dollar's Worth of my Remedy Free to Try.

I can afford to offer a full dollar's worth free because mine is no ordinary remedy. Ordinary remedies treat symptoms. My remedy treats the causes that produce the symptoms. Symptom treatment must be kept up forever—as long as the cause is there. My treatment may be stopped as soon as it has removed the cause, for that is always the end of trouble.

Stomach trouble is not really a sickness, but a symptom. It is a symptom that a certain set of nerves is ailing. Not the voluntary nerves that enable you to walk and talk and act—but the automatic stomach nerves over which your mind has no control.

I have not room here to explain how these tender, tiny nerves control and operate the stomach. How worry breaks them down and causes indigestion. How misuse wears them out and causes dyspepsia. How neglect may bring on kidney, heart, and other troubles through sympathy. I have not room to explain how these nerves may be reached and strengthened and vitalized and made well by a remedy I spent thirty years in perfecting—now known by Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I have not room to explain how this remedy, by removing the cause, puts a certain end to indigestion, belching, heartburn, insomnia, nervousness, dyspepsia. All of these things are fully explained in the book I will send you when you write.

In more than a million homes my remedy is known. It has cured stomach troubles not once, but repeatedly—over and over again. Yet you may not have heard of it—or hearing, you have delayed or doubted. So I make this offer to you, a stranger, that every possible excuse for doubt may be removed. Send me no money—make me no promise—take no risk. Simply write and ask. If you have not tried my remedy, I will send you an order on your druggist for a full dollar bottle—not a sample, but the regular standard bottle he keeps constantly on his shelves. The druggist will require no conditions. He will accept my order as cheerfully as though your dollar laid before him. He will send the bill to me.

Will you accept this opportunity to learn at my expense absolutely how to be rid forever of all forms of stomach trouble—to be rid not only of the trouble, but of the very cause which produced it? Write today.

For a free order for a full dollar bottle you must address Dr. Shoop, Box A898, Racine, Wis. State which book you want.

Women Should Acquire a Fine Sense of Honor, of Truthfulness and Desire for Thoroughness

A WOMAN in business is very much distressed by having the statement made to her that the word of our sex was not held in high esteem in the legal world, and that from almost every standpoint woman was regarded by man as a rather irresponsible being.

Until the last quarter of a century woman was what man made her, with his laws and restrictions and traditions. Yet even with all those handicaps she has left a remarkable record upon the books of history.

In every walk of life, in every art and sphere, woman has made her shining mark. During the last twenty-five years her progress has been less impeded by the debris of old traditions, and she has sped forward upon the broadening road of progress with astonishing rapidity.

Comments and criticisms such as my correspondent repeats are scarcely worth remembering or refuting. Man compelled woman to prevaricate about herself for so many centuries that if she has still the tendency to withhold the truth or to distort it at times we need not wonder.

Man hid her away from all knowledge of the great issues of life so long and kept her in ignorance for fear she would know herself and him too well that we should not be surprised if she is still unable to grasp real conditions of life as readily as he is.

A realization of personal responsibility has only begun to dawn upon woman. She still thinks of herself, to a great extent, as the privileged being—where self-dependence is concerned—that man educated her to believe was God's intent when she was formed.

Without question, woman does not keep appointments of a business nature as promptly or regard obligations as seriously as the majority of men do. Few business women are as thorough as men in their work, and their methods are less direct, less positive. Women are usually more nervous than men, and consequently less agreeable to deal with.

It is only the exceptional woman who possesses the power of concentration, which is one of the first qualities a man develops in business. Women scatter their forces in a thousand avenues, where men conserve them. Women have not yet learned to know the value of time in business matters as men perceive its value.

Tactful and agreeable in social life, yet in business woman rarely shows those qualities to the same degree the most blundering man exhibits them in his dealings with his fellows.

She is often brusque with her own sex and indifferent with the other, mistaking both attitudes for poise in the business world. Woman still expects privileges and benefits to be granted her, because she is a woman.

But all these peculiarities will be outgrown with the passage of time and the increasing opportunities allowed her for the cultivation of her full powers. Here are a few suggestions for every woman who has started upon a business career and who wishes to prove herself as successful as her male competitors.

Let her put down in her notebook these qualities as worthy of cultivation:

A sense of responsibility to fill her position with dignity and exactness.

A realization of the value of time, her own and that of others.

Promptness in keeping engagements.

A purely business point of view regarding debts, with no idea of sex privileges or benefits.

The value of affability and the necessity for tact in business affairs.

The need of controlling the nerves and nervous actions.

A fine sense of honor, of truthfulness, and a desire for thoroughness.

Meantime here is what is reported by Mlle. Borst, a French woman philosopher, who has been experimenting with men and women in the matter of credibility of evidence. The experimenter used twenty-four persons, twelve of each sex, in her investigation.

After ending the tests, which covered several weeks, as the subjects were examined repeatedly, Mlle. Borst tabulated the results.

She noted false answers, correct answers, answers certain and uncertain, correct or wrong answers given under oath. She thus discovered the extent of the evidence given, its faithfulness, the assurance of the witness, the influence of the oath upon him or her.

These are her chief conclusions:

Entirely faithful evidence is the exception, every witness supplying from his or her imagination the omissions of memory.

About ten per cent. of the statements in a voluntary deposition are wrong.

Depositions brought about by suggestions are longer than voluntary ones—fuller, that is, of detail—but less reliable.

Evidence improves by practice.

Women are more truthful witnesses than men.

About one-twelfth of the statements in a deposition under oath are incorrect.

Mlle. Borst's investigation simply bears out, in a scientific manner, the idea that woman sees more details than man, and remembers them better.

It is an interesting discovery.

This would indicate that "the woman in business" has been misinformed regarding the legal status of woman's word the world over.

Do Women Enjoy Life As Much as Men Do?

DOROTHY DIX

STRIPPED of all the chiffons with which we have surrounded the subject, the real object of life is to achieve happiness—to have a good time.

People who have bad digestions, and who cannot enjoy themselves anyway, may deny this, and assert that the purpose of existence ought to be to forward some high moral aim.

But the fact remains that the great desire of most of us, and the great struggle, is for pleasure.

This brings up an interesting problem as to whether men or women have the better time.

To me there seems but one answer to the question—men have most of the fun of the world.

Next to being born an idiot or a criminal—with whom the law classifies her—the heaviest handicap that is ever laid on a human being is the handicap of being born a woman.

Except for bearing children there is nothing that a woman is ever called on to do that her sex doesn't make harder. This is the case even in the purely domestic pursuits. A man can cook better than a woman because he is physically better able to wrestle with the pots and pans.

He is more suited for housework because it doesn't break his back as it does a woman's to reach up with the dusting brush after cobwebs and get down on his knees and scrub for dirt, and he would make an ideal nurse because he wouldn't be hindered by petticoats.

If you watch a woman going up the steps with a baby in one arm and a lighted lamp in her hand, and trying to hold up her skirt, you will realize how many difficulties even a mother labors under in being a woman.

Women do not have as good a time as men do enjoying the ordinary, legitimate pleasures of life, and when it comes to participating in the hilarities of existence they are simply barred out. The price is too high. It may be that for their dissipations men, in the end, have to pay the piper, but women who are gay and giddy have to pay for a whole orchestra.

That women are less happy than men we unconsciously recognize in our attitude toward them. We are surprised when a woman even shows a sense of humor. We are amazed when she jokes, and we look with suspicion upon her if she is merry and is given to laughter.

Indeed, we are so accustomed to women taking a serious, if not melancholy, view of things, that a cheerful woman, and one who sees things cheerfully, is sure to be spoken of as frivolous and light-minded.

You never heard these adjectives applied to a man, no matter how big a clown he is.

Men begin having a better time than women almost in their cradles. Boys, except the few unfortunates who have little Lord Fauntleroy mothers, escape the awful torture of having their stringy locks pulled, and hauled, and twisted, and contorted into long, flowing curls, such as poor, persecuted little girl martyrs are forced to wear.

Every child's birthright is freedom and dirt, but the unhappy little girl of respectable parents never comes into her inheritance.

As they grow up the depressing conditions of sex become more and more apparent. They must sit quietly and sedately down and play dolls, instead of engaging in the sports that send the rich red blood racing through the veins, and give the health which is, after all, the source of all happiness.

Worst of all, they miss the freedom of childhood, which is the only freedom that we ever really know in life, for after we are grown we are all bond-slaves to fashion, duty, necessity and a thousand other tyrants.

Of course, it may be said that each sex knows its trials and tribulations, and that, while women envy men, men feel that they have troubles beside which a woman's worries are but pin pricks compared to a dagger thrust.

The subject is, however, an interesting one. What do the BOSTON AMERICAN readers think—which have the better time, men or women?

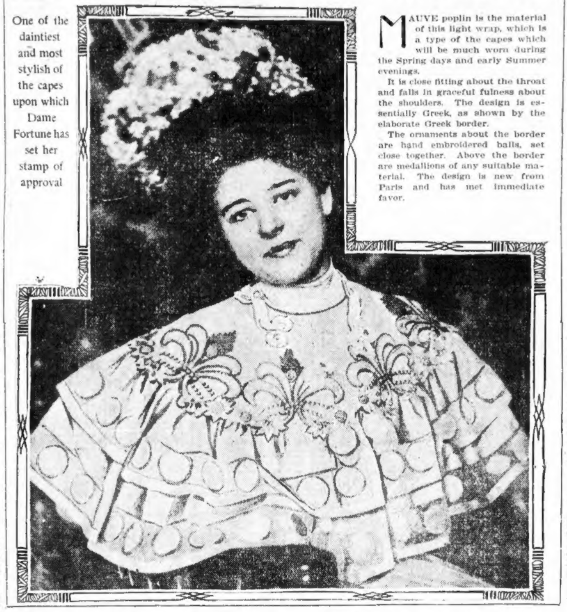
THIS CAPE FOR SPRING WEAR IS ALL THE RAGE

One of the daintiest and most stylish of the capes upon which Dame Fortune has set her stamp of approval



MAUVE poplin is the material of this light wrap, which is a type of the capes which will be much worn during the Spring days and early Summer evenings.

It is close fitting about the throat and falls in graceful fulness about the shoulders. The design is essentially Greek, as shown by the elaborate Greek border.

The ornaments about the border are hand embroidered balls, set close together. Above the border are medallions of any suitable material. The design is new from Paris and has met immediate favor.

SCARLET LIES

SYNOPSIS.

Stephen Holland becomes engaged to Mary Armstrong, the only daughter of Robert Armstrong, who has amassed a colossal fortune as a soap manufacturer. In the height of his happiness Judge Holland is mysteriously shot by an assassin, but before his death he reveals to Stephen that he is only an adopted son, and binds him, on sacred oath, to carry out his wishes as revealed in a document which is in the safe.

In his remorse Stephen takes Judith Mort, a friend of the murdered man, into his confidence. She plots to use this knowledge to her own advantage. She urges him to destroy the document. They search for it, but find it has been stolen. They decide to keep the secret together. He confines himself to the house and decides to break his engagement with Mary.

Stephen, however, enlists the services of the Mapelia police to find his father's murderer. Robert Tagg, a young detective, finds a valuable clue.

At a ball given in the Armstrong mansion Judith Mort and Morley Darch plot to separate Stephen and Mary. Mr. Holland calls on Mr. Braine. Mr. Darch sees Miss Armstrong. The plot thickens.

Some one hints to Robert Armstrong that Stephen has no right to his name. In an interview with the Soap King Stephen denies the accusation.

He at first suspects Judith Mort has betrayed him. He leaves the yacht at Mobile and speeds to Boston for an interview with Fergus Braine, who has located George Lang, whom he believes holds the key to the mystery of Stephen's birth.

"ON the contrary, very little," he answered. "I deal only with music hall artistes as a rule; circus people seem to be a race apart. But, as I was saying, Mrs. Lang, I have taken a great fancy to your son. I see a great future for him. I hope to be able to do something for him some day."

"You are very good," murmured Mrs. Lang. There was something in his tone that she did not understand, and she looked at him in slight astonishment.

"Just before you came, Mrs. Lang," Braine continued, "your son was telling me about his experiences in Africa and his accident, and of the kindness of a certain great man who is now dead—Judge Holland."

His furtive eyes were fastened on her face. He saw what he wanted. At the name of Holland a strange expression came into it. It was not a start of surprise, but rather a shadow of pain. It was as if the name brought back to her memories that were never quite asleep—as if the stranger had pronounced a name that was never quite absent from her thoughts.

She did not speak at once. Her eyes were fastened on the bent head of little Dorrit, who sat quietly at her feet, the wintry sunshine gilding her pretty fair hair. At last Mrs. Lang said quietly:

"Yes, Judge Holland was very good to George."

"Why didn't your son apply to him for help when he came back from Africa?" asked Braine. "Or, if not then, when he lost his money last year? Judge Holland was a very powerful man——"

"I know," interrupted Mrs. Lang. "But I am glad he didn't. I like to think that George is proud. Judge Holland saved his life; that is as much as one man can do for another. To ask him for money after that would have been base."

"You never met Judge Holland, Mrs. Lang?"

It was meant to be a bombshell, but the answer came at once, without even a perceptible pause.

"Oh, no, Mr. Selwyn, I never met Judge Holland, although I should have liked to thank him for saving my boy's life."

After that, somehow, the conversation languished.

"Were you ever a——" began Braine, after a moment's pause. He glanced comprehensively around, but he did not know how to finish his sentence. In the presence of this stately woman it seemed ridiculous; but she understood.

"Was I ever a circus performer?" she asked, with a strange little smile, and then shook her head. "No, Mr. Selwyn, I was a professional, but in another line of business. But now I've finished Lola's skirts, and I'm afraid I must go back and cook these good people something to eat before the show begins."

Braine took the hint and rose. Evidently there was nothing more to be learned from Mrs. Lang. She had already given him more valuable information by one look on her face than her son had imported with all the story of his adventures. For the time being it was enough.

"Good-by, Mrs. Lang, and good luck. Good luck to you and your son!"

"Thank you, Mr. Selwyn. I wish you good luck, too."

They shook hands, and he left her, with a kindly farewell to the little girl.

Then Mrs. Lang rose slowly, with a strange, faraway look in her eyes, and, without heeding the child, she walked up the steps into the living carriage, and closed the door.

Her hands went to her throat; she loosened the collar of her shabby gown, and pulled out a miniature and gazed at it, tears filling her beautiful eyes. It was the face of a young and handsome man she gazed upon, and the painted ivory was surrounded by large pearls. Surely a strange bauble for a woman to possess who traveled with a second-rate circus!

"Holland!" she murmured, with a strange note in her voice, the echo of a grief that cannot die. "Holland! Holland!" How long since anyone has spoken the name to me! Oh, my husband, the years are long! But some day I shall meet you, though never on this earth, and you will know the truth."

CHAPTER XX.

Sorting the Threads.

BRAINE walked slowly back to the hotel, where he had left the small bag in which he had packed a few necessaries of the toilet in case he should be obliged to spend a night in Port Cleno. But this proceeding was not necessary. He had done enough for the present; indeed, had he not done everything? He had fulfilled his commission; he had found the Langs. And yet there was some instinct at the back of his mind that told him that it was not everything—that it was only the beginning.

Braine boarded the express to Boston and, as the parlor train thundered along through the gray November landscape, he gave himself up to the task of sorting all the information that he had gleaned and storing it away in one of the pigeon holes of that marvellous mind of his, which from now henceforward would be labelled "Holland Case."

He was bound to confess that, although he had done his client's bidding, he had learned nothing, as far as he personally was concerned, of Stephen Holland's reason for seeking these people out.

The obvious explanation, of course, was that Stephen Holland had been charged by his father to find the man who had served him in South Africa, and whose life he had saved, and give him some material assistance, in memory of the dangers and perils that he and the late Judge Holland braved together.

Braine, however, thoroughly mistrusted the obvious. Besides, there were several other objections to the theory. One was that George Lang had distinctly stated that Judge Holland had not known him by his real name, his nickname of "Leo" having been used by all connected in the expedition.

Another, and yet a still more significant one, was that Stephen Holland had said nothing whatever about George Lang having served his father ten years ago, but had distinctly stated that neither he nor his mother had been heard of since 1882, when they had been living on Worcester street. And that was more than twenty years ago.

Now, surely, if Stephen Holland had known anything about the African episode, he would have mentioned it. Braine, therefore, was forced to the conclusion that he was ignorant of it. This meant either a strange coincidence or a thorough mystery, for never for a moment did he credit Stephen Holland's assertion that he was making these investigations in his professional capacity as a lawyer on behalf of a client.

But the most important piece of information that the great detective carried away with him was undoubtedly the fact that in the past Mrs. Lang had known Judge Holland. She had betrayed it the moment Braine had spoken his name by that strange look of quiet pain that had crossed her still beautiful face.

Braine flattered himself that there was no shadow of an expression on the human face that he could not read, and that he never made a mistake. And on Mrs. Lang's face he had read a plain tale of memories awakened by the dead Judge's name.

To what phase of the past these memories referred he had no clue. Mrs. Lang had flatly denied having met the late Judge Holland; but that meant nothing. Also, to what purpose he might one day be able to put his knowledge that he had acquired was as yet shrouded in obscurity; but he had a sort of feeling that he had touched the fringe of one of the great secret dramas of human life.

On his arrival in Boston he found a thousand things to occupy his attention, and he resolutely put the "Holland case" from his mind. As far as that was concerned there was nothing for him but a masterly inactivity. Meanwhile he thought sometimes in the days that followed of Judith Mort and her strange bargain with him—that she would pay him $5,000 if he proved these people to be dead. Apart from the fact that she was also on the high seas, being one of Robert Armstrong's guests on his yacht, Braine was in no hurry to communicate with her.

In future he might be able to do business with her; he did not know. He did not see his way clear at all; he was groping in the dark for some clue to the strange actions of these highly placed people. But one thing was certain—Stephen Holland was the first string to play on. If it was to be a question of material benefit, it was better to serve a millionaire than a beautiful young unmarried woman of limited means—for the present, at any rate.

Then, one evening, about a week after his visit to Port Cleno, Braine received a telegram. It said:

"Stop all investigations at once," and was signed "Holland."

Braine rubbed his large, white hands together and narrowed his eyes to slits.

"Now, what the dickens does this mean?" he asked himself.

But no answer was forthcoming, and so the sudden telegraphic command went to join the rest of the somewhat confused notes in the mental pigeon-hole labelled "Holland Case."

Two days later, about six o'clock in the evening, a clerk tapped at the door of Braine's private room.

"Mr. Holland wishes to see you, sir," he said.

It would be wrong to say that the great man was amazed, but he was certainly a little surprised, although he did not show it.

"Show him in here, Fenton," he said, "at once."

Now, the clerk was a confidential clerk, and knew his master's business.

"You have given Mrs. Mantleford an appointment for 6:15, sir," he said apologetically. "She is coming up from the country."

"Ask her to wait when she comes," ordered Braine. "If I keep her too long, ask her to come again to-morrow at the same time; and show Mr. Holland in here at once!"

When the clerk had gone, Braine again rubbed his large white hands together, and again he asked himself:

"Now, what the dickens does this mean?"

Do you know how to wash your face?

NOW don't get angry.

I simply mean that most people think that washing the face is a question of soap, water and a towel.

Well, it isn't.

What will make one face soft and rose pink will make another rough and brick red. Isn't that so? What will make one face as smooth as satin will make another as harsh and chapped as a rasp file. Freckles, "blackheads," and, worst of all, pimples, will disappear on one face under the same treatment that will bring them out on another. And the right way to wash your face in Summer is often exactly the wrong way to wash it in Winter.

Therefore:

Every woman has some splendid recipe for making a roseleaf skin, removing blemishes and keeping away that worst of "bugaboos," wrinkles, and all her sister readers of the AMERICAN would like to read about it.

So send in your pet recipe, and for each of the five best received before Sunday, April 2, the AMERICAN will send in return, free, a beautiful cut glass, silver topped powder box, with puff, as shown in the illustration.

Address all recipes, "Wash Your Face Editor," BOSTON AMERICAN, 80-82 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

With Whiskey

This is a true and tried recipe, also very simple to make and use. Put one ounce of powdered gum of benzoin in a pint of whiskey; to use, put in water in wash bowl until it is muddy, allowing it to dry without wiping. This is simple, easy and perfectly harmless.

MISS GERTRUDE HILTON.
Abington.

No Paste or Powders

First, do not use any kind of paste or powder, for they are injurious; go to bed early and rise early and bathe the face in hot water and then in cold water after; dry the face with bath towel; rub upward; then take one egg in a glass of milk; do not eat any fat or very much butter; take a walk every day and the complexion will be beautiful.

MRS. G. C. TUCKER.
Wakefield, R. I.

Soft and Smooth Face

Simmer all day one-fourth pound of flaxseed in three pints of rain water. Strain through cheese cloth, pressing it quite hard to remove all the liquid, which will be quite thick. Mix thoroughly two drachms of carbolic acid, four ounces glycerine, one-half pint cologne. Add this to the strained flaxseed. Bottle and use freely, rubbing the face and hands softly until they are dry.

No. 74 Hawes street, Central Falls.

For Tan and Freckles

One pint of buttermilk, a tablespoonful of grated horseradish; let the horseradish soak in the buttermilk about ten hours before using. Smaller quantities may be used; buttermilk thickens easily in warm weather. Bathe the face before retiring and rub with the hands until dry; also drink freely of pure buttermilk, as it is an excellent liver tonic. If the liver is in perfect order, the complexion will be perfect.

MRS. J. H. FITZGERALD.
No. 635 East Eighth street, South Boston.

Never Fails

One pound epsom salts, one ounce rose water, five cents' worth glycerine, five cents' worth violet perfume, one quart rain water; boil salts, glycerine and rain water together for five minutes. When cold add rose water and perfume; bottle; get twenty-five cents' worth of alcohol and bay rum, equal parts; use the latter on face to cleanse it instead of water. Never touch the face with soap and water. It causes wrinkles and hardens the skin and creates blackheads. Wet the corner of the towel with bay rum and alcohol and rub the skin briskly. Anyone will be surprised to see what a difference this makes in only a few days. After using the bay rum then apply the No. 1 lotion with the fingers and smooth over the face till perfectly dry. This gives a massage treatment as often as applied, and leaves the skin with a clean, waxy whiteness, unlike powder.

MRS. E. J. ROW.
No. 33A Bow st., Somerville.

Thorough Drying Important

Put one heaping teaspoonful of Indian meal into a cupful of cold water before retiring. In the morning drink the water before breakfast and the meal also if you like. Follow this up every morning for six weeks and you will have neither pimples, boils or any facial blemishes, but a clear, smooth skin. Use no outward applications, but wash the face in cold water, using a good soap, rinse in cold water and wipe very dry. Thorough drying is important.

MRS. H. FARLEY.
No. 167 Water street, Haverhill, Mass.

Nature's Complexion

Am not an advocate of scented complexion creams, powders, etc., and firmly believe that if the following instructions are adhered to the results cannot be other than a fine, rosy complexion. The first essential requirement is plenty of fresh air day and night. Upon arising in the morning take a sponge bath in tepid water, then with a Turkish towel rub the body until it glows; follow this by a few deep breathing exercises in a well-ventilated room. A good walk should be taken if possible in the morning. The bowels must be kept in perfect condition, which should be regulated entirely by the diet—good, plain, substantial food; no pies, cake or rich puddings; eat plenty of fruit; drink all the cold water you can between meals; take a glass of hot water the first thing in the morning and upon retiring; an apple is also excellent, eaten the last thing at night. Last but not least, do no worry and have at least eight hours' sleep.

MISS MYRTIS GRAHAM.
Melrose.

May Dew and Other Things

To make the complexion fair and smooth wash the face every morning during the month of May, that it is possible, in dew from the grass; bathe thoroughly and let it dry on and stay for an hour or two every morning; wash off in cool, not cold, water. At night, two or three times every week, bathe the face in a little lemon juice, diluted with rose water; allow it to dry on and remain over night. Next morning wash off with tepid water, then give the face a good splashing in clear cold water. This treatment is infallible where the health is perfectly good. Before this application at night, the face must be cleansed with some good, pure soap and warm water, then thoroughly rinsed with tepid water and dried on a soft towel. Neither this nor any other treatment will insure a good complexion where the health is not good.

MRS. HELEN TUCKER.
Glen road, Boston.

FIVE of these superb cut glass silver mounted powder boxes with puffs will be given for best recipes for washing the face.

NEW AMERICAN BISHOPS NAMED AT CONSISTORY

Pope Confirms Rt. Rev. Thos. F. Hickey Coadjuttor Bishop at Rochester, N. Y.

PERSECUTION IS DEPLORED

ROME, March 27.—The pope held a secret consistory to-day without creating any cardinals, merely preconizing bishops. The only American was Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Hickey, who was confirmed as coadjutor bishop of Rochester, N. Y. Mgr. Zotico Racicot was confirmed as auxiliary bishop of Montreal, Que.

All the cardinals met in the hall of the consistory of the vatican, where they received the pontiff, who entered, dressed in white, surrounded by the papal court and flanked by the noble guard and Swiss guard. When the pope was seated on the throne all the prelates advanced to pay homage to the pope, who recited the prayer of the Holy Ghost, after which only the cardinals remained.

The pontiff then delivered an allocution and immediately afterward proceeded to the preconization of Bishops. The allocution in moderate terms deplored the persecution from which the church suffered in some countries and complained of recent events in France, where beside the diplomatic rupture between the republic and the papacy the statesmen are preparing for the separation of church and State, for which, the pontiff asserted again, the Vatican was not responsible, as had been alleged. The rupture was to be deplored.

The pope also referred to the persecution of the church in some of the South American republics, especially in Nicaragua and Ecuador, citing the laws passed by the last-named republic against the church, providing for the confiscation of the property of the religious orders, interferring with the liberty of the religious associations and setting obstacles in the way of the appointment of new bishops.

To offset this the pontiff mentioned the fact that the arbitration between Chile and Peru had been intrusted to the papal representative, which had caused the holy see much satisfaction.

IMMIGRANTS REACH BOSTON BY THOUSANDS

Canopic Has 1,662, Cymric, Due To-day, Will Add 1,180 to Foreign Population.

With the arrival of the White Star liner Cymric, due to-day, all immigration records at the Boston port will be broken. The Canopic is just in with 1,662 steerage passengers, immigrants; the Cymric will bring 1,180. It is expected that there will be great trouble at the immigration office in handling this vast crowd should the Cymric arrive on time.

Early to-day it was found necessary to call out extra police to handle the crowd of 2,000 Italians, Greeks and Portuguese which had gathered to meet friends and relatives who arrived on the Canopic.

Clamor for Admittance.

This dense crowd packed Water street, Charlestown, in the vicinity of the White Star line pier and clamored for admittance. The police kept them under control while the government officials passed upon the various immigrants on the big steamer.

The unusual arrivals here are in line with the greatly increased arrivals of immigrants at New York from Russia and from the Mediterranean ports. For the first three months of this year at New York it is estimated that the immigration will exceed last year's record by something like 100,000, and Boston, too, is feeling the flood of this rush to America. Already records here are near breaking; to-day, should the Cymric arrive on time, the record for one day will be smashed.

This rush of immigration to the United States this year is despite the fact that the rate cutting between the steamship lines for steerage passengers has been stopped, and within a few months the rates have been higher than they have been for many years.

Officials Are Puzzled.

The continued rush, therefore, is a great deal of a puzzle to customs officials. The incoming tide from Russia they understand, but from the Mediterranean ports they do not.

On the Canopic, which arrived to-day, were many prominent Bostonians, among them Mr. and Mrs. Moorfield Storey, B. W. Warren of Brighton, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Estes and Dr. Frank H. Tilton. There were altogether 82 saloon, 122 second class and 1,662 steerage. On the Cymric are 45 saloon and 1,180 steerage passengers.

MYSTERY OVER MAN WHO LAY DEAD ON TRACK

Special to the Boston American.

WESTBORO, March 27.—The police are investigating the mystery surrounding the death of Frank Cunningham, whose mutilated body was found on the tracks of the Boston & Albany Railroad between here and Grafton last Friday night.

The man had no shoes or stockings on, though the feet bore no evidence of his having walked barefoot. His overalls were not torn, although his back was broken at the base of the spine.

The man was identified to-day by John Dee, the keeper of the tramp house, as a wayfarer who applied there for a night's lodging a week ago Sunday.

It is the theory of the police that the man was riding on top of a freight train and was thrown off by striking a bridge. It is presumed from the condition of the body that he fell in front of another train.

SHOT THROUGH TUNNEL ROOF, MAN WILL LIVE

WORKER IN NEW YORK SUBWAY UNDER EAST RIVER RESCUED ON SURFACE OF WATER.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Blown through the roof of the Brooklyn-New York tunnel, under the East River, by compressed air escaping from an inrush of water, an excavator in the tunnel, given up for lost, was picked up by a boat on the surface of the river to-day, sent to the Long Island College Hospital, and, although frightfully injured, he will recover.

The accident is one of the most remarkable that has ever occurred in tunnel construction, and the man's amazing escape from death seems little short of miraculous. Fifteen men were working in the advanced chamber of the utnnel, from the Joralemon street end, and were almost directly beneath the centre of the river.

In some manner the compressed air pressure, which not only supplies the workmen with air but serves to support the roof of the tunnel and keep out the water, became diminished. The tunnel is fifteen feet below the river bed, but with the diminishing air pressure the water began to flow into the chamber. The men, seeing their danger, started on a run for the next chamber, but five of them were unable to reach it.

Their companions went back for them, however, and four of them were dragged to safety. The fifth could not be reached, and as the water was pouring through an enormous hole in the roof of the tunnel, he was given up for lost.

The remarkable forces pent up in the tunnel, however, operated to save him. As the inrushing water began to fill the tunnel the air pressure increased. The workman was suddenly caught in the current of escaping air, the force of which had grown tremendous.

Suddenly, as though caught in an explosion, he was shot through the hole, up through the great depth of water, and suddenly appeared on the surface of the river to the amazement and consternation of people in nearby craft.

Doctors Say He Will Live.

The disturbance in the river occasioned by the escaping air from the tunnel, and the sudden appearance of a man on the disturbed surface, amazed everyone. A boat was hurriedly put out to him, however, and he was taken to the foot of Jeralemon street, where an ambulance from the Long Island College Hospital had already been summoned to attend the other injured men. He was taken to the hospital and the physicians say he will live.

BIG REVIVAL IS STARTED IN FALL RIVER

Union Service of Protestant Congregations Is Held in Central Church.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, March 27.—A monster union revival service of all the Protestant congregations in the city was called to order at 10:30 to-day in the Central Congregational Church, looking to the "Spiritual, moral and general welfare and upliftment of the city." The financial and commercial distress resulting from the great textile strike of last year is one of the present conditions which the promoters of this revival had in mind in considering the "general welfare."

The Rev. Matthias S. Kaufman, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church and chairman of the revival committee of arrangements, says:

"We have realized for some time that the spirit of revival was strong throughout the country. We have been considering the question from a local standpoint, and have decided that this union gathering was the best solution for our needs."

SAILOR DROWNED; 3 BIRTHS ON VOYAGE

NEW YORK, March 27.—After one of the stormiest voyages in her career, the Hamburg-American liner Pretoria arrived here to-day from Hamburg, which port she left on March 12. One seaman was washed overboard and lost and there were three births in the steerage.

QUITS RACE FOR ELECTION POST

Charles R. Saunders, the Republican member of the Board of Election Commissioners, has written to Mayor Collins that he is not a candidate for reappointment. His term expires April 30.

Mr. Saunders was appointed four years ago by Mayor Hart and represented the radical wing of his party. He succeeded George P. Sanger. His relations with the other members of the board have at times been strained. Three months ago the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN exclusively announced that Mr. Sanger might be asked to take the place and this now seems to be a probability.

Charles H. Innes of Ward 10 is a candidate for the position, but is understood to be objectionable to the Democratic organization.

Dr. Greene's Nervura
ABSOLUTELY FREE.

Having a positive knowledge of the wonderful beneficial effects of my Nervura as a spring tonic, nerve strengthener and blood purifier, thus preventing meningitis, and curing colds, grippe, malaria, etc., I will present a trial bottle, absolutely free, during the present week, at the prescription counter of my medical office, 34 Temple Place, Boston.

I make this free distribution with absolute confidence that its use will prove its superior merits and fully demonstrate its remarkable unequaled and unprecedented curative powers.

By keeping the liver and kidneys active, throwing off impurities of the blood and strengthening the nerves, health is assured. Those who are already aware that Nervura is the best of all spring remedies, are invited to secure the regular large size bottle at their druggists.

In fact my remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, is really and absolutely the only professionally compounded remedy of its kind before the public today, being prepared, compounded and vouched for by myself in person. I have been in active practice at 34 Temple Place, Boston, for the last 37 years, and will stand behind this remedy in all cases. I will also consult and advise with any who see fit to call or write, regarding their ailment, without charge of any kind.

J. A. GREENE, M. D.

Specialist, Author and Medical Lecturer.

Note—The fact that Dr. Greene is proprietor of that unrivalled remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, is sufficient guarantee of the doctor's honesty and eminent medical ability. This remedy has cured more people of nervous, stomach and kidney derangements than all other proprietary medicines combined. It is the premier medicine for spring debility.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the standard unequaled family medicine and spring tonic, excelling in curative properties and life-giving action all other nerve and blood remedies.

The proceeds of the performance will be devoted to free scholarships in the Opera School.

LANGLEY TELLS WHY HE LEFT WIFE IN BOSTON

Boston Man in Denver Says He and Mrs. Langley Could Not Agree.

KNOWS MISS EVA THOMAS

Joshua B. Langley, formerly bookkeeper of the Old Colony Trust Company, society man and baseball player, who has left his wife here, has been heard from in Denver, Col. He is willing, he says, to grant a divorce and a sum of money to his wife. Mrs. Langley, according to him, wants a separation with monthly alimony.

"My wife and I could not get along together," he says, "and under the circumstances I naturally turned to other girls."

Miss Eva Thomas, whose name was mentioned in Denver dispatches in connection with Mr. Langley's departure for the West, is a Denver girl who is taking a special course at the New England Conservatory of Music.

With some emphasis, Miss Thomas declared her belief that Mrs. Langley was responsible for bringing her name into the matter of her husband's departure.

The marriage of the father the second time to a Newton woman caused an estrangement amongst the children and afforded the unusual spectacle of two brothers working side by side as clerks for the Old Colony Trust Company for years and never speaking.

Preparations are in progress for the fifth annual ball of the Boston Eyrie of Eagles, which will be held in Symphony Hall Easter Monday night. It is the intention of President Gartland and the committees to have the event surpass all those of previous years.

The Boston Eyrie numbers over 1,000 members in good standing. Nearly all of Governor Douglas's staff have signified their intention of being present, and it is possible that the Common Council will attend in a body.

Prominent politicians of all parties are expected, as well as State and city officials. The newly elected president, William T. Gartland, will lead the grand march.

Indigestion?

I offer all Stomach Sufferers a Full Dollar's Worth of my Remedy Free to Try.

I can afford to offer a full dollar's worth free because mine is no ordinary remedy. Ordinary remedies treat symptoms. My remedy treats the causes that produce the symptoms. Symptom treatment must be kept up forever—as long as the cause is there. My treatment may be stopped as soon as it has removed the cause, for that is always the end of trouble.

Stomach trouble is not really a sickness, but a symptom. It is a symptom that a certain set of nerves is ailing. Not the voluntary nerves that enable you to walk and talk and act—but the automatic stomach nerves over which your mind has no control.

I have not room here to explain how these tender, tiny nerves control and operate the stomach. How worry breaks them down and causes indigestion. How misuse wears them out and causes dyspepsia. How neglect may bring on kidney, heart, and other troubles through sympathy. I have not room to explain how these nerves may be reached and strengthened and vitalized and made well by a remedy I spent thirty years in perfecting—now known by Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I have not room to explain how this remedy, by removing the cause, puts a certain end to indigestion, belching, heartburn, insomnia, nervousness, dyspepsia. All of these things are fully explained in the book I will send you when you write.

In more than a million homes my remedy is known. It has cured stomach troubles not once, but repeatedly—over and over again. Yet you may not have heard of it—or hearing, you have delayed or doubted. So I make this offer to you, a stranger, that every possible excuse for doubt may be removed. Send me no money—make me no promise—take no risk. Simply write and ask. If you have not tried my remedy, I will send you an order on your druggist for a full dollar bottle—not a sample, but the regular standard bottle he keeps constantly on his shelves. The druggist will require no conditions. He will accept my order as cheerfully as though your dollar laid before him. He will send the bill to me.

Will you accept this opportunity to learn at my expense absolutely how to be rid forever of all forms of stomach trouble—to be rid not only of the trouble, but of the very cause which produced it? Write today.

For a free order for a full dollar bottle you must address Dr. Shoop, Box A898, Racine, Wis. State which book you want.	Book 1 on Dyspepsia. Book 2 on the Heart. Book 3 on the Kidneys. Book 4 for Women. Book 5 for Men. Book 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases are often cured by a single bottle. For sale at forty thousand drug stores.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 27, 1905.

"We Want to Keep the Street Cars Out of Politics"

That Is the Doleful Cry of the Men Fighting Municipal Ownership in Their Own Selfish Interests

It is pleasing to learn from many of our readers that they have undertaken seriously the task of MAKING INDIVIDUAL CONVERTS TO THE IDEA OF MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Every man WANTS to be influential. The good citizen wants to be influential FOR GOOD. This is a critical moment in the history of American cities. You who read this, BELIEVING IN MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP YOURSELF, can do nothing more useful than to make others think as you do.

Make yourself a truly influential man, in the real American way, by discussing the great issue with your friends, man to man, and making votes for it with the help of your arguments and intelligence.

You will have to combat, among other sophistries, the old familiar cry about "PUTTING STREET RAILWAY EMPLOYES INTO POLITICS."

The corporation owners that have so long exploited the cities and the people are very ingenious in manufacturing bugaboos.

They tell us that if THE CITY owns the street railways the MAYOR OF THE CITY BECOMES A CZAR OF UNLIMITED INFLUENCE.

They ask us to believe that the Mayor will appoint and discharge at will thousands of men, who, in consequence, WILL BE FORCED TO VOTE FOR HIM TO KEEP THEIR PLACES.

That is a little, foolish bubble, very easy to prick. In talking to your friends, prick it at an early date.

In the first place, all the employes, under municipal ownership, WILL BE IN THE CIVIL SERVICE LIST.

The men now employed WILL BE KEPT IN THEIR POSITIONS, of course. Theirs would be the first right and first claim.

Others would be appointed in the proper way, after proper civil service examination.

Judge Dunne, who is to be elected Mayor of Chicago on a strict municipal ownership platform, has clearly mapped out the course to be followed in Chicago and everywhere else.

Employes, under city ownership, will be examined TO TEST THEIR FITNESS. They will be made to prove that they know HOW TO RUN A STREET CAR, managing the motor without running over people, handling passengers, etc. They won't be asked to tell how many stars there are in the milky way or what is the shortest road from Pekin to Harbin.

A man ONCE employed by the city will be employed for life—or as long as his good conduct lasts.

Neither the Mayor nor anybody else will be able to APPOINT HIM OR REMOVE HIM.

The street car railway employe, under municipal ownership, will be THE MOST INDEPENDENT WORKMAN IN AMERICA.

He won't be laid off at the will of selfish employers. He will be subject to proper discipline, of course, and to discharge for neglect of duty—as he SHOULD be. But, as Judge Dunne has pointed out, he will have, in every case, the right to appear in court to face his accusers and justify himself if he can.

He will be protected in his work, secure in his wages, free from the whims of individuals, AS EVERY SELF-RESPECTING MAN SHOULD BE.

So much for the theory that the municipal ownership would mean a great army of heelers employed at the mercy of politicians, and making them all powerful.

There is another side to the matter, and that is THE CHARACTER OF THE ORDINARY AMERICAN WORKMAN.

Has that ordinary American workman proved himself such a VERY servile person?

Is it a fact that a man in America, will, ordinarily, give up his manhood, his right to vote honestly, for two dollars a day or three dollars a day?

Is the ordinary, common, every-day worker on a street car possessed of any less self-respect than Mr. Harlan, for instance, who represents J. Pierpont Morgan in the Chicago election?

When you discuss this question with your friends, just call their attention to the letter carriers of the United States. THEY are on the people's payrolls. Are they not an independent body of men? Is not the president of the New York letter carriers' association a DEMOCRAT, although every high official above him is a REPUBLICAN? Does that look like servility?

The letter carriers are SECURE IN THEIR PLACES, and the street car men, under municipal ownership, will be secure IN THEIR PLACES.

They will be independent American workmen, earning their money, giving a fair day's work for fair pay. They will be afraid of nobody, as long as they do their duty, and that is as it should be.

The theory that the ordinary American workman loses his manhood and votes subserviently out of regard to his payroll is a theory that has been overworked. It does not tally with facts.

As a matter of fact, MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP will take the street railways out of politics.

To-day, as every workman on the street cars will tell you, IT IS THE POLITICIAN THAT HAS THE PULL.

When they want favors, when they want permission to swindle the public out of their rights, the street car companies go to the big politicians.

In return they give these politicians PATRONAGE. That patronage consists in the right to give men jobs on the street cars. Incidentally, it involves the right TO DISCHARGE MEN ALREADY EMPLOYED.

Many an honest, hard-working man, WITHOUT A PULL, has lost his job because some political heeler wanted it for another. If you doubt this, go and ask the conductors and motormen that you happen to know.

Municipal ownership will create—not a body of servile voters, controlled by the machine—but a body of independent men, creditable to the city, a body that can be relied upon to vote for the interests of the public, which will pay them fairly and treat them fairly.

On Friday we requested our intelligent readers to send in suggestions for editorials during this campaign. Many valuable replies have been received. The above editorial is written in reply to our good friend and reader, Mr. Thomas J. McGovern, who writes:

W. R. HEARST:

Dear Sir—It is with a distinct remembrance of the numerous frauds the Hearst papers have exposed, the wrongs that have been righted, and the fairness and promptness with which your papers have taken up the two sides to a question, that I write this letter.

While the municipal ownership subject is before the people, the many instances quoted of its success, and the undoubted good such a climax to the traction controversy that would be gained, I venture to ask this question, in a statement of a few facts.

In the event of the city getting control of the street railways:

Would the crews of trains hold their jobs as a "pull" unbreakable as the laws of the Medes and Persians?

Would the aforesaid crews be selected for their intelligence, civility, ability—or their service to some ward boss or politician?

Would the lower fare be offset by a proportionate decline in comfort and equipment of cars?

Would the "grafting" process not extend to the management of this local railway system? There are many other "woulds," but the above gives a fair idea of my point, I believe. Respectfully,

THOMAS J. McGOVERN.

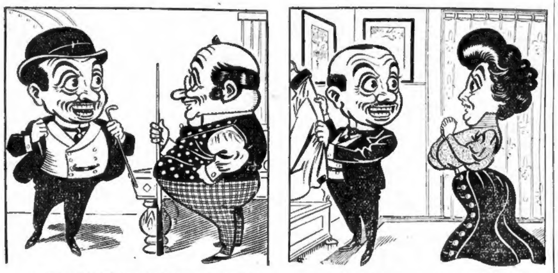
1. MRS. SNOOKS—John, dear, I want you to be here promptly at 2 o'clock and take me to the art exhibition.
MR. SNOOKS (aside)—Heavens! I know nothing about art! I hate art exhibitions. I must find a way out of this. All right, dearie.

2. MRS. SNOOKS—Why, what is the matter, John?
MR. SNOOKS—Great grief! O-o-o-o-h! An attack of appendicitis, as sure as fate! I must rush right down to see Dr. Carver. Don't worry, dear. If it means an operation I'll telephone you.



3. MR. SNOOKS (rushing into the club)—Hello, Doc. Carver! Say, have I got appendicitis?
DOC. CARVER—Heavens, no! Why?
MR. SNOOKS—I only wanted your opinion so I could join you in a game of billiards for a couple of hours.

4. MRS. SNOOKS (on Mr. Snooks's arrival home for dinner)—Oh, John, dear, I have been so worried! Did you see Dr. Carver?
MR. SNOOKS—Yes, wifey. He said it wasn't appendicitis at all. It was funny how sudden that attack came on me, wasn't it?

All This Outcry Against Women Wearing Birds On Their Hats Is Waste of Reform Material

"They are going to try persuasion first."

"I SEE," said the Bookkeeper, "that a society of noble and intrepid young men in Berlin has decided to put a stop to women wearing birds on their hats, peaceably if they can, forcibly if they must."

"How do they propose to put the kibosh on a woman trimming her hat any way she pleases?" inquired the Stenographer.

"They are going to try persuasion first, and then if that fails they are going to use physical violence," returned the Bookkeeper. "According to the campaign plan of reform, whenever one of these gallant and heroic youths observes a woman with a bird in her bonnet he is going to approach her, and gently, but firmly, request her to remove the corpse of the poor little birdie from her hat. If she refuses he is going to snatch the fowl off her bonnet."

"Don't women use hat pins in Berlin?" asked the Stenographer.

"Oh, I suppose so," assented the Bookkeeper.

"Well," exclaimed the Stenographer, "if I was an oculist I'd hike out for Berlin on the first boat, for along about the time when strange men take to snatching the birds off of women's headgear there is going to be something doing in the hat pin line, and more men will have their eyes punched out than a few."

"Heaven forbid that I should ever do anything so dangerous as to meddle with something that a woman thinks is an adornment," said the Bookeeper with a shudder.

"And that's no joke," returned the Stenographer. "Women will let men decide their religion and their politics for them, but when it comes to try to dictating to them about what they shall wear a man does it at his peril.

"No woman is meek and down-trodden enough to stand for it, and if that set of foolhardy young men in Berlin do try to snatch the birds off women's hats they'll be so clawed up that they will make a champion German college duelist look like the advertisement for a patent skin food.

"I don't know what the Amazons fought for, but I bet it was the right to wear what they pleased, and as long as a woman thinks a thing is becoming no mere man is going to stop her from adorning herself with it. Look at the way doctors preach against corsets and tight lacing, but does it keep a single lady from giving herself the smallest waist measure that she can maintain and still breathe at all? Not much. Don't you suppose every woman that strips off her flannels in the Winter, and puts on a decollete dress and goes to the opera knows that she's running the risk of death? Of course she does, but that doesn't keep her from doing it if she's got a passable neck and shoulders.

"And just as long as a woman can look into a mirror and see that wings on her hat add to her pulchritude, or that a chapeau composed of a dead fowl and a rose takes ten years off her age, it's all up with little birdie, and if all the men in the world were banded together in a society to prevent it they wouldn't cut a particle of ice."

"It's funny," remarked the Bookkeeper, "that tender-hearted woman should be so ruthlessly cruel when she comes to adorning herself. It takes a sympathetic, gentle, pitiful lady to deck herself out in furs made of the skins of unborn lambs and hats trimmed with dead birds. No man would wear a thing that cost so many lives."

"No," assented the Stenographer, "it takes a man to go hunting and kill things for fun, that he can't even use to ornament himself with."

"Will no power ever stop women from the cruel custom of wearing birds on their bonnets?" inquired the Bookkeeper.

"Yep," responded the Stenographer. "Fashion can. The milliners could break it up in two minutes. But it seems to me that all this outcry against women wearing birds on their hats is a lot of waste of good reform material. We kill animals for food, why not for ornament? Besides, most of the birds on women's hats were made by milliners, and not by God, anyway. Nobody ever saw their like in nature."

Plea of the Harlemite

[Although the New York subway strike is settled, the effects of the recent tie-up are still apparent in delayed and over-crowded trains, running on a go-as-you-please schedule, and occasionally running into each other. This is how a Manhattan poet feels about it:]

By James Montague

DEAR Mr. Rothschild, I humbly beg to state
That to the hills of Harlem I fain would emigrate.
A loving wife awaits me; about the flathouse door;
My pretty children look for one who comes, alas! no more.
I know it's most presumptuous that I should ask of you,
Who never heard of Harlem, to let the trains go through;
But, oh, dear Mr. Rothschild, please flash beneath the foam
A tip to Mr. Belmont to take me to my home.

Two weeks ago I left it; my tender babes, at play,
Ne'er dreamed they would not see me for many a weary day.
My wife caressed me fondly and whispered softly, "Jack,
You know I pine without you, so hurry, hurry back!"
Ah! Joyous was the morning, the sky was bare of clouds,
Firm faith buoyed up the spirits of all the eddying crowds.
Since then from "L" to Subway, though hourly I roam,
The trains are stalled or crowded, and I cannot get home.

A sad and sorrowing exile, I painfully recall
The crags and bars of Harlem. Ah! How I loved them all!
I think about my children, who look for me in vain,
As snails into the station the daily crawling train.
And thus I gather courage to send this humble plea
To one who scorns the troubles of folk across the sea.
Ah! Noble Mr. Rothschild, of course I have no right
To ask it, but pray pity
AN EXILED HARLEMITE.

Nowadays a man's credit and morals are viewed through his purse.
JUVENAL.

Little Editorials from the People

EXTEND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In a recent number of the BOSTON AMERICAN I saw and read your editorial on public ownership of public utilities, and the thought occurred to me, what are we to consider public utilities? Are we to be satisfied with the idea that a few things, like gas plants, street railroads, water works, electric light plants and the like are all the public utilities there are?

What about mills, factories, the farms the mines? Does not the public use the product of the mine, the factory, the mill or the farm as much as we use the product of the gas plant or any of the so-called public utilities? And if it is a good thing for the public to own the gas plants, is it not also good for the public to own the factory or the mill or the farm, and, in fact, all the varied forms of industry by which the material needs of mankind are supplied? But you say, that is Socialism. Well, then, God hasten the day of Socialism!

HERE'S A WOMAN'S VIEW OF MOTHERHOOD

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your editorials certainly are vigoro[illegible] and ring true every time, and come surel[illegible] from a clean heart and clear mind. Thi[illegible] was evidenced in your answer to "Twenty six" a few days ago, when you [illegible]serte[illegible] that the woman who is a mother is th[illegible] real woman.

Every right thinking person m[illegible] coi[illegible]cide with you there, although ma[illegible] ble[illegible]ings are due to childless women the wor[illegible] over for love and kindness shown by the[illegible] to the world's friendless waifs.

President Roosevelt, in his address t[illegible] the Mothers' Congress voiced much th[illegible] same opinions, but he scored ro[illegible]ndly th[illegible] selfish woman in whose life there is [illegible] place for children. Now as a woman a[illegible] a mother, I cannot help tempering censu[illegible] with pity for the moral blindness wi[illegible] which such a one is afflicted, for o[illegible] age must inevitably come, and with [illegible] retribution.

And she who shirks must pay the price-
The sum of childish laughter missed
Of little eyes and dimpled mouth
And little hands she has not kissed.
